MOONSHINERS ARE GIVEN DEATH SENTENCES

GIANT ZEPPELIN DUE TO REACH AMERICA WEDNESDAY

NO MISHAP YET IN CROSSING FROM BERLIN TO U. S.

By CARL D. GROAT.
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, Oct. 13.—Speeding safely 1,600 miles from her starting point at Friederichshafen, the giant Zeppelin ZR-3 reached the Azores this afternoon and passed high overhead above the little group on the steadily pursuing her westward course toward America.

Wireless reports reached Friederichshafen that the dirigible, making good time had arrived at the Azores at approximately 2 p. m. and continued on her way.

The Zeppelin's course takes her on another 1,600 mile leg to Bermuda, where she turns northward to Lakehurst, N. J.

Spanish stations relayed messages reporting the passing of the airplane.

Slipping through cloud and sunshine like a great silver wreath, the Zeppelin ZR-3 was high over the Atlantic Ocean today headed for America on a southwesterly course.

Everything was well with the giant dirigible, which should reach Lakehurst, N. J., Wednesday, the ZR-3 was behind schedule when last reported but was proceeding steadily on her course, at a speed that averaged about 60 miles an hour. Early today she reported she had "hit it up" to 90 miles an hour.

Leaving Friederichshafen, mother nest of Zeppelins for a quarter of a century this latest and possibly last of the brood that was to make Germany supreme in the air, swung westward over France early Sunday morning.

The start, in a dripping fog, was made at 6:10 a. m.

For a time the ZR-3's pilot, Dr. Eckener, head of the Zeppelin works, hesitated as to his course, the wireless chattering busily with land stations. Then he headed for Belfort, France, and crossed France, the northern tip of Spain, the Bay of Biscap and headed out to sea.

When last reported early today, the Zeppelin was about 600 miles from the Azores. (She probably had covered nearly one-third of her journey by 8. a. m. Eastern standard time today.)

It was about 3 a. m. Berlin time that the airship reported making 90 miles an hour while Dr. Eckener messaged that one time, over a shore stretch on Sunday, the ZR-3 made 130 miles an hour. This was with the aid of a strong wind, however. At 5 a. m. Berlin time the Zeppelin called for the weather report from the Hamburg Sea Observatory.

An hour later a report was received that a vessel had sighted the ZR-3 at 4 a. m. G. M. T. a quarter of the way between the North Corner of Spain and the Azores."

At 11 a. m. the Hamburg Sewarts, had not received the reprt which the Zeppelin was to send out at 8 a. m. and it was believed that the Sea station had lost touch with the airship. (Washington advices said contact with the ZR-3 would not be established by American Government radio stations until the craft was within 1,500 miles of the United States.

The Azores are 1,600 miles from Bermuda which is about 650 miles from Lakehurst, N. J.)

LA SALLE GIN BLOWS UP INJURING J. D .WILLIAMS

J. D. Williams was seriously injured Friday at LaSalle when the gin plant at that place was demolished by a boiler explosion in the engine room. He was a young man a veteran of the world's war and faced the disaster calmly, making his exit from the gin stand room through a hole and afterward fell unconscious on the gin lot. It was found that he had been hit by a brick, the force of which seemed to have been near his kidneys. His condition was a subject of much concern Saturday. A mule was killed in the explosion.

ANATOLE FRANCE MOURNED TODAY BY ALL PARIS

(By United Press)

PARIS, Oct. 13.—Anatole France is dead and all Paris today mourned his passing.

"Throughout the civilized world today," says the Echo de Paris, summing up Parisian opinion of the beloved writer, "all those who love beauty in the world and who appreciate royalty of the spirit, are in mourning."

The author of Thais and Le Jongleur De Notre Dame passed away at Tours Sunday after a long illness. He was 80 years old and had lived a long full life, rich in literary activity.

Funeral arrangements have not been announced pending opening of the author's last testament today. The body is laid out in a plain white night shirt, in accordance with M. France's wish.

"I'll never see you again," he told his wife just before he died, evidently clinging to his well known atheistic beliefs to the last.

The press today paid him unanimous homage, asserting he will live in history as one of France's greatest literary figures, a writer who carried on the glory of France literary tradition of Chataubriand, Victor Hugo and Benan.

The body of M. France must be placed in the Bantheon along with that of other great men, says Quotidien, the left organ and Le Journal asserts:

"Regardless of the fact that at present a party opinion or cult claims Anatole France, French literature can mourn him in superiority to this melee."

M. France's real name was Jacques Anatole Thibault. He was the son of a royalist book seller and was born in Paris April 16, 1844.

Such a vote should be counted for all the democrat so voted for and for the republican so voted for.

"Where no agreement or proposal to vote for the person on the second marked ticket has been entered into or made, and no request has been made to the person receiving or securing such marked ticket to vote for the person on the marked ticker, the law would not be violated by the preparation of a sample marked ballot for distribution among the voters as circulars or for publication in newspapers showing the voters how they may lawfully vote for the democratic presidential electors and other nominees except for governor and also the republican candidate for governor.

"THE LIGHTS THAT DID NOT FAIL"

"Cabin watchmen and cabin patrols on duty in the night time on all vessels with staterooms shall have in their possession while on such patrol duty a suitable and efficient dry-battery flashlight."—General Rules and Regulations of the United States Steamboat Inspection Service.

"LET there be light!"

A fragment from Genesis is Uncle Sam's text in the mandates of the Board of Supervising Inspectors of the American Steamboat Inspection Service.

They rule, these inspectors, for the safety of all citizens traveling in vessels of American register, whether on river, lake or ocean. And, because tragedies on the river occur oftener at night, they have drawn from experience in demanding that every passenger ship under their jurisdiction shall be equipped with extraordinary lighting facilities.

Not sufficient is the ordinary lighting system run by the ship's dynamos. Accident has too often put it out of commission, as witness the collision in Long Island Sound last July between the Eastern Steamship Company's liner Boston and the oil tanker Swift Arrow.

Nor is it enough that an auxiliary lighting system be ready for use in case of failure of the main lighting plant. Again is the Long Island Sound disaster evidence of the need of greater safety measures.

Demand a Flashlight

Thus it is that the inspectors demand a pocket flashlight be carried by all watchmen and cabin patrols. No damage to dynamos or auxiliary lighting plants can extinguish the beam of light whose power is found in dry batteries held in the hand.

In that crash in the fog on Long Island Sound—where four lives were lost—the flashlight, as an emergency means of life-saving, had its most recent opportunity to demonstrate its worth. The searchlight from the tanker, standing by after its prow had gouged into the Boston's hull, provided the illumination for launching most of the liner's boats. On the far side, however, where the superstructure interposed a barrier to the searchlight ray, it was the beam from a flashlight which made possible the lowering of two humanity-laden craft to the bosom of the water.

Reason for Ruling

The occupants of those two frail boats, thankful that night to have the comforting beam played upon them, may have wondered how the flashlight came to be on board. To say a regulation requires it is scarcely sufficient. The Steamboat Inspectors, as has been said, draw from experience in specifying equipment.

That there were flashlights on the Boston; that there are flashlights on every passenger vessel in the American marine goes back almost five years—back to the night of October 28, 1919, when the steamer Muskegon in a blinding lake storm, went crashing into the pier-head at Muskegon, Michigan.

Loss of the Muskegon

The Muskegon was lost that wild night, and many a life was snuffed out when she was battered to pieces on the pier-head, but lives were saved, and the saving was by the kindly fortune which prompted the assistant light-keeper from the Muskegon lighthouse to have in his possession a small pocket flashlight.

The story is still told around the Great Lakes, a story of intrepid courage on the part of both passengers and crew. The coincidence alone would recall the tale—the steamer Muskegon lost at Muskegon—but the theme is always the same—how a tiny flashlight guided men and women and children to safety down a sheer slide of eleven feet from the crumbling hull of the doomed steamer to the safety of stone pier head.

Wedged to Pier

When the Muskegon ran afoul of the pier-head, her paddle wheel caught in the stone-end section of the jutty. She was one of the old side-paddle type, a fact which aided in the preservation of many on board. With the starboard paddle wheel thus wedged, her starboard guard overhanging the pier, the Muskegon had a list of from thirty to forty-five degrees to port. This list brought the steamer's side to a corresponding angle to the pier.

The height from the pier to the cabin deck was about eight feet, with a protection rail of about three feet making a slide of eleven feet. About midway, the main rail projected enough to afford a step for those sliding down, while a hauled-up fender offered a slight help in alighting on the pier.

The Flashlight's Value

But all this was in darkness, a black night made more awesome by the roar of water and storm and the crashes which denoted section after section of the wrecked steamer being carried away. No man knew what lay below him until the assistant light-keeper came out upon the pier-head, a small flashlight in his hand. He trained its beam upon that eleven foot slide of danger and, one by one the survivors of the Muskegon came down to safety.

The Supervising Inspector of the Eighth District made a detailed report, not only of the wreck and its causes, but of the manner in which a flashlight had saved human lives, and the Board of Supervising Inspectors, at its next meeting, added to Section 15 of the General Rules and Regulations prescribed for ocean, coastwise, lakes, rivers—in fact, all vessels with staterooms—a paragraph devoted to flashlights. The new mandate became operative July 1, 1920.

Saving the Powhatan

Within a few months there was evidence of the importance of the Inspectors' new ruling. It came from the U. S. S. Powhatan, which was disabled two hundred miles off Halifax, the ship's lighting system being put out of commission by the same heavy seas which wrecked the propellers. Weak storage batteries were reserved for radio calls and flashlights were called into play to signal the ships which put towards the vessel in response to the distress calls.

Oil lanterns had first been tried on the Powhatan, but were extinguished as rapidly as they were lighted. The flashlights were impervious to wind or wave. Guided by the steady beams of light from the deck of the steamer, the rescue vessels were able to close in and take the disabled ship in tow to Halifax.

Other Evidence

Other instances since then have proved conclusively the value of the flashlight in saving life at sea. There is the case of the Obernai, which sank March 8 of the present year in Nova Scotian waters. Its crew owed their lives to the forethought of the first officer, who carried a pocket flashlight with him into one of the boats. The usual flares could not be lighted in the heavy seas, but the beam of the flashlight located the small boats for the rescue ships which came to the scene in response to the Obernai's last wireless calls.

Several weeks after the sinking of the Obernai, the Ward liner Santiago went down off Hatteras. One boatload of survivors was picked up, due entirely to the fact that they were able to signal with a flashlight carried by an officer. The other boat from the Santiago disappeared at sea.

Many instances have proved the soundness of that ruling made in 1919.

"Let there be light."

The central drawing shows how a flashlight in the hands of the assistant lighthouse keeper at Muskegon, Mich., guided passengers and crew of the wrecked lake steamer Muskegon to safety—the act which resulted in the flashlight becoming a compulsory part of the equipment of each cabin watchman and cabin patrol. On the left is shown the loading of one of the boats of the Eastern Steamship Company's liner Boston, after a collision in Long Island Sound, and the small insert on the right illustrates the way in which the crew of the Obernai was saved.

Good Government League Thinks Dr. Butte Will Win

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 9.—"George C. Butte will be the next governor of Texas if straw votes are any indication of public sentiment," according to John Marshall of Sherman, president of the Good Government Democratic League of Texas, which is espousing the candidacy of Mr. Butte for governor.

"Reports of straw votes taken at various representative gatherings have been forwarded to the headquarters of the Good Government Democratic League at Dallas," said Mr. Marshall, "and these votes more than speak for themselves of the trend of public opinion. The taking of these votes was entirely unsolicited by our headquarters and each can be substantiated as to its authenticity."

Quoting from the San Antonio Light of recent date, Mr. Marshall called attention to the following poll taken at a luncheon at the Conopus club of that city: "Dr. George C. Butte, candidate for governor of Texas, polled 91 votes and 'Ma' Ferguson 8 at the Conopus club luncheon. * * * The poll was taken following a speech by Jed C. Adams, democratic national committeeman from Texas.

"A straw vote taken by the Amarillo News showed that Butte was the favorite about 7 to 1 in that section. At a meeting of 19 local factors there, 17 were for Butte and 2 for Ferguson. At a meeting of the Lions' club of that city a poll showed 46 votes for Butte and 16 votes for Ferguson.

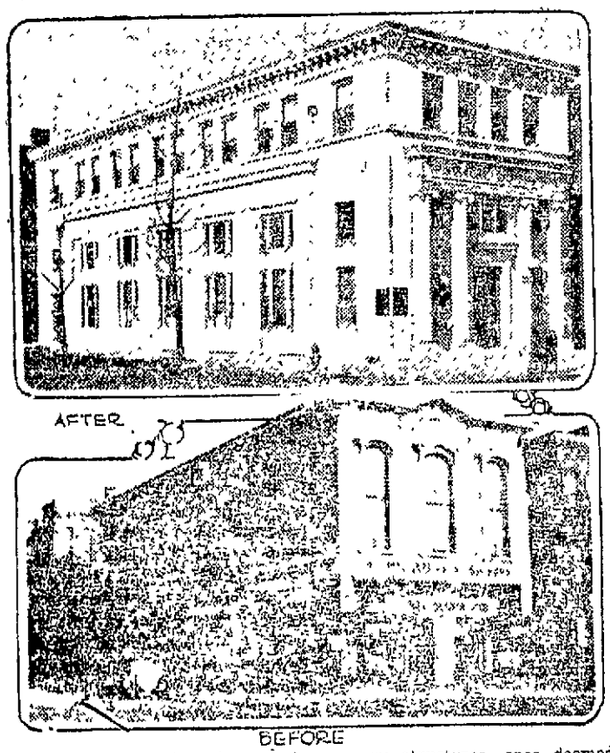
"In one department of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas railroad in Dallas, out of 15 employes, 13 were for Dr. Butte for governor.

"Traveling men throughout the State are opposed to Ferguson, and one drummer reported that he had talked with more than 50 fellow drummers within the past 10 days and found all of them opposed to the election of 'Ma' Ferguson.

Mr. Marshall has also been advised that in all sections of the State that branches of Good Government Democratic league are being formed. Many of the branches were already formed and functioning as non-partisan bodies before the organization of the Good Government Democratic league, and these are continuing their work under their original names. Others are being formed rapidly from among the democrats in their respective sections who are opposed to the election of Mrs. Ferguson, according to Mr. Marshall.

J. D. Arrington Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe D. Arrington is reported quite low in Baylor Sanitarium Dallas from a throat operation. However if no unforseen complications arise his physicians think he will soon be on the road to recovery. J. D. is the promising young son of our fellow townsman and his wife who it will be recalled was so ill at Castle Heights Military college in Lebanon, Tenn last year and had to be brought home after a most serious illness. The family have the prayers and sympathy of the entire city and we hope to soon report this young son's full recovery.

Old Buildings Are Being Transformed By the Magic Touch of the Architect



Bedford, Ind.—By the magic touch of the architect, hundreds of old buildings are being transformed into modern structures of rare beauty.

Through this skillful art of rehabilitation, an outstanding development of the 1924 construction boom, innumerable old brick buildings have been replaced by stone skyscrapers.

Trainloads of Indiana limestone have gone from the Bedford-Bloomington district this year for use in such alteration work. Architects have proved that refacing masonry structures, once deemed a task of rare skill, is today the most practical method of modernizing and beautifying old buildings at low cost.

Striking examples are found in all types of structures, ranging from the Hudson Motor Company building, Detroit, to the Peoples National Bank of Waterville, Maine.

The accompanying photographs show the remarkable transformation of the International Exchange bank, Washington, D. C., of which O. Harvey Miller was the architect.

KAISER DEMANDS HUGE SUMS FROM THE GERMAN PEOPLE

(By United Press)

BERLIN, Oct. 9.—Prussian Finance Minister von Richter is nettled with the business methods of former Kaiser Wilhelm II.

He has discovered that the Kaiser is insatiable in his demands upon the German republic, in connection with the settlement of his estates in Prussia.

Von Richter claims that in the course of negotiations covering five years the Kaiser has raised the ante on the Prussian government. The Kaiser's representatives, Excellenz von Berg, says the Hohenzollern house, including 40 members, needs 1,125,00 marks yearly income to keep the wolf from the door.

Von Richter responds that he in no wise desires to put the former Lord of Prussia on starvation rations but he estimates that 115,000 acres of valuable farm and forest land in Germany, plus a few castles, running into millions of marks in value, will yield several times the minimum requirements set by the Kaiser.

On the other hand, von Berg reached the conclusion that the Kaiser needed at least 400,000 acres and that the settlement proffered by the Prussian state would bring the royal family not over 1,000,000 marks a year.

All of which led von Richter somewhat testily to announce that he thought it just as well to have a show down in the courts with the Hohenzollern house. Whether this show-down will come is uncertain. The Kaiser's supporters hope von Richter makes good his threat, saying that the republic is destined to lose if the old time judges have a crack at the case.

Clayton States This Year Is A Democratic One

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 8.—"This is primarily the year of Democratic opportunity," says a statement issued from the office of W. L. Clayton Cotton Exchange Building, Director of Finance for Texas, National Democratic Committee, and urges Texas Democratis to contribute to the campaign fund of John W. Davis, the presidential nominee, directing attention to the fact that but a few weeks remain in which to complete Texas' quota of the fund. To stress his point, Mr. Clayton points to the internal dissensions developing in the Republican ranks.

"The whole Republican party is in open revolt," the statement explains, referring to the public demand by Senator Brookhart (Rep), Iowa, that General Dawes be eliminated as the G. O. P. vice-presidential aspirant, and the Iowan's attack upon President Coolidge.

"There are more Republicans who take the same view as Brookhart, and that Senator's rebellion is due to his desire to get a man on the ticket more in sympathy with the agricultural interests of the country. Practically, it is true, the Republicans now have read Brookhart out of the party owing to his attack, but Charles W. Bryan, Democratic vice-presidential nominee, estimates that about 25 per cent of the Republican Senators also are demanding farm relief, listing them as coming from Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, Idaho, and "one in California."

"As to Nebraska, there is evident a genuine fear among Coolidge Republicans that Senator George Norris, who has hitherto kept silent as to Coolidge, will emulate Brookhart's example and that, should he do so, Nebraska may be regarded as definitely lost to the G. O. P.

"These developments in the Republican ranks are inevitable as Coolidge has never sought to placate the G. O. P. insurgent, but fought them in Congress and in the Cleveland convention, and to all practical cated from Republican campaign activities. All of which is grist for the mills of Democracy."

HOME DRESSMAKING

Just the Thing for Girlie

An Apron That Covers the Dress

One can play without thought of getting the dress soiled in this apron of checked gingham bound with mercerized cotton braid. It has patch pockets, a sash an' ever'thing.

This little model might be called a dress apron, were it not for the large armholes and slit sides, because it almost completely envelops the figure. It is certainly a most practical garment to slip on over a frock to protect it from the havoc of play.

The apron, for a girl of six years, calls for 1¼ yards of gingham 32 inches wide, with 3 yards of mercerized braid. The lower edge of the back and front of the apron are cut in round outline and there are little tab extensions at the sides of the front long enough to be tied in sash effect at the back. These extensions are caught together with a loop of self material.

As the first figure of the diagram shows, to make the loop for the sash cut a strip of gingham about 3 inches long and 2 inches wide. Sew the edges together, placing the two right sides together. Then turn the fold to the right side (Fig. II) and neatly turn under the edges at either end. To stitch the folds to the sides of the apron, turn under the ends as shown in the third figure of the diagram. The folds may be put on with machine stitching, or they may be sewed on securely by hand and then a few fancy stitches such as cross-stitch or fagoting added.

The pockets are cut with rounded lower edges to correspond with the line of the apron, the top edges being stitched with the braid. A number of interesting things may be done with the design. It may be carried out in cretonne, with braid used for the binding, or it may be made of unbleached muslin and the pockets embroidered in applique effect, taking the form of flowers or small animals.

NAMES SUGGEST'D FOR NEW GAS BAG COMING OVER SOON

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Thousands of suggestions for naming the ZR-3 upon its arrival here have been received from all over the United States by the Navy Department.

"President", "Coolidge," and "President Coolidge" are the suggestions of many. Indian names are popular, many of them proposed no doubt because Shenandoah, America's other giant dirigible bears an Indian name, meaning "Daughter of the Stars."

For this reason "Romona" (Daughter of the Sun), and "Nekomis" (Daughter of the Moon," are frequently mentioned. "Minnehaha" (Laughing Water) is another suggestion.

FIRST PICTURES OF CHINESE WAR, SNAPPED UNDER HEAVY FIRE.

④ REMOVING WOUNDED ⑤ CHEKIANG SOLDIER ⑥ BRITISH MARINE ⑦ CHEKIANG GUN & DUGOUT

These are the first pictures of the fighting for the possession of Shanghai, China, snapped by a staff correspondent of the International News Service. Believe it or not, Chinese soldiers carry their umbrellas into action, and in Figure No. 1, a Chekiang Province gunner defending the city may be seen seeking shelter under his in a trench on the Huangtu front. The Red Cross operating table on the same front was made from two Red Cross kit boxes and a door panel. The Chekiang artilleryman, under heavy fire, finds a safe berth under his gun. Despite the intensity of the fire, his tea kettle at the right was going merrily. The wounded are removed in rikshaws by conscripted coolies, who also must take up ammunition and food. The photograph of the Chekiang private was taken under rifle and machine gun fire, but he didn't seem to mind. British marines are ashore and encamped in Jessfield Park, outside the foreign settlement in Shanghai, to protect foreigners. This modern Chekiang gun, surrounded by empty cartridge cases, was fired many times at Huangtu. The Chinese guns are of German, French and Japanese manufacture.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

The number of telephones in a city; the number of electric light meters or gas meters, is almost as good as indicators of the growth or slump in population as a numerical census of the population.

Paul Kauhl, manager of the Mexia Oil & Gas Company, was asked the eternal question: "How's Business?"

"Well, business with us is good," he replied. "Our number of regular patrons, as measured by gas meters installed, increased last year about 25 per cent. Some of our company officials think that 1924 will show a 100 per cent increase, but to be conservative, I think a 50 per cent increase will be mighty good."

According to Mr. Kauhl, the average monthly bill for gas where used for household purposes like cooking and heating, runs around $2.00 in the summer and $6.00 in the winter. Truly, an economical fuel.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.—(Adv.)

"For Mexia. I WILL"

THE IMPORTANT THING

Rear Admiral Henry S. Wilson, superintendent of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, in submitting his annual report to Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, gives expression to an ideal that may be well considered by every American citizen, young and old.

He says: "As stated in my reports for 1922-23 the one single thing of great importance to the midshipmen is that they shall have instilled in them, perhaps unconsciously, but so thoroughly as to become an integral part of their makeup, a recognition of the Eternal Worth of Character."

Comment is superfluous. This educatonal axiom should be posted in every school room in America and in every home. Our people are taught to be "go-getters" and the men of achievement are held before them as examples. They are urged to get on in the world, to get position, to get wealth, to get power, but after all, life is a total loss unless the exhortation of the ancient philosopher is heeded,—"with all your getting, get Wisdom,"—which is just another way of saying, recognize the Eternal Worth of Character.

Thirteen years ago the custom of observing Fire Prevention Day throughout this country was established, when October 9th—anniversary of the Chicago conflagration of 1871—was set aside for that purpose. More recently it has been customary to observe the entire week which includes October 9th, to the end that a comprehensive program in keeping with the importance of the occasion may be placed in effect, the purpose of which is to impress the individual citizen with the fact that the tremendous fire waste is everybody's loss and everybody's responsibility, and that a great majority of the casualties and fires that occur may easily be avoided.

There is no mystery about Fire Prevention—it is a vital necessity. Fire Prevention is not a science—it is simply common sense.

October 5th to 11th has been designated as Fire Prevention Week this year. Will you be prepared to do your part?

Town Ne'er-Do-Well, Trained in Law, Acting as Own Judge, Banishes Self

By W. F. SULLIVAN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 9.—Bob Carruthers, town character of Liberty near here, has been banished forever.

In one of the most unusual sentences ever written in the court records, Carruthers, who by his weakness for liquor tossed away ability and the opportunity of establishing a reputation as an eloquent orator, recalled the wrath of his youth long enough to use his eloquence to pronounce his own banishment from Clay County.

The ne'er-do-well must abide by the decision of the court his own [illegible] trial judge of the case [illegible]

[illegible], of a leading family [illegible] of really superior [illegible] ties in the country, who dabbled in law, studied for the ministry, and who had the makings of a wonderful orator, regained possession of his silver tongue temporarily and meted out his fate of banishment.

It happened thus. Carruthers, who had been arrested on a charge of drunkenness, arranged his own bond and was ordered to appear in court for a preliminary hearing before Judge M. L. Swanner, Justice of the Peace of Clay County.

At the appointed hour for the hearing Judge Swanner was called to another part of the county for another hearing and unintentionally forgot about Carruthers. The latter was punctual and to his great surprise found the justice's chambers deserted save for the janitor, who was acting the tribunal in order.

Gathering the judicial hearing that was once a real part of his togeth-er, Carruthers stepped to the judge's bench, seated himself in the chair and called his case. The janitor set his broom aside and sat as witness.

Carruthers, in the role of prosecuting attorney, stepped from the judicial platform and with powerful adjectives denounced the defendant in the case for his chronic drunkenness. The lone spectator in the courtroom had heard many arraignments but seldom had he heard a defendant given such an unmerciful flaying.

Then the plea of mercy came and the Carruthers of old, or rather as when he was young, reappeared. As attorney for the defense he waxed eloquent. His words were pathetic, his tone sympathetic and the effect touching. The janitor-witness wept.

Both prosecution and defense having rested their case after brilliant appeals pro and con, it was given to the judge for decision.

Ascending the bench "Judge" Carruthers decreed that the defendant, Bob Carruthers, should be banished forever from Clay County and the case was ended so far as the "court" was concerned. Lifting his head high, Carruthers walked proudly from the courtroom.

When the janitor recounted the strange proceedings to Judge Swanner and the clerk of the court, the judge declared: "My sentence shall stand."

Bob Carruthers, exile, has disappeared.

CONTENTMENT

by OWEN FRIEND WATKINS

The light of day that rose in glorious splendor
And lured me on to grasp my hopes in life
Had now grown dim, and left the same old story
Of ceaseless grind and endless toil and strife;
While thus I sat, in lonely meditation,
Reviewing days an unkind fate had sent,
I fell asleep beneath the stars and moonlight
And had revealed the land of sweet content.

Two fairies came, attired in gold and purple,
To bear me to that land of perfect bliss
On Fancy's wings, and show me all its beauties
Relentless fate decreed that I should miss:
The anxious wish in all my dreams of pleasures,
Of things that bring contentment to my heart,
Were there revealed and placed in my possession
That I might know the gladness they impart.

Upon a hill arrayed by landscape artists
A mansion stood carved out of blended stone
With colonades of classic architecture
The hope and pride of avarice to own:
It's inner walls were decked with art and sculpture
And orient rugs lay thickly on its floors
For nought was spared, of gold and gifted science,
To build a home the yearning heart adores.

Its owner told of all his disappointments,
How luxury had hushed the voice divine,
Of love betrayed and wild, licentious, revels
Where Bacchus ruled to blot the holy shrine:
The pow'r of gold had swept away ambition
For nought was left to stir the holy flame
Surrounded there with all that man can conquer
With time to spend in idleness and shame.

In vain regret I turned from that dominion
To tread my path along the vale below
Where Nature's hand had mingled trees and flowers
Onverdured sod where streamlets gently flow;
There in a realm where God portrayed His glories
And sent the birds to sing eternal praise
An open glade disclosed a wood-hewn cottage
To welcome me to share its simple ways.

Around the hearth five happy children gathered
To learn and heed their parent's good advice,
Three sisters arms entwined with their two brothers
With love and faith reflected in their eyes:
No envied strife, no greed, no sensual passion
E'er hovered there to blot the holy charm
For God had sent the song of sweet contentment
To fill their souls with happiness so warm.

5 Herds of Elephants With Great Show Thurs.

Smart as elephants are known to be, there are "dumb-bells" among them.

Take Joe for example. Joe is the eighteen months old youngster of the twelve "Baby Bunting" elephants who are coming here to devour peanuts and perform with the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey circus. Joe just can't learn. Or it may be that Joe simply won't learn.

Frankly, George Denman, keeper of the forty-three adult elephants has his doubts. So he is determined that Joe be given every possible chance.

"You see," Denman explains, "after I had taught the twelve babies to do a few simple tricks, I decided to form an orchestra. Marcella learned to play a horn in no time at all, Mary was soon beating a drum, and Bingo just loves to play the cymbals. It was decided to teach Joe the bass viol and so I had a small one made for him. But do you suppose he would practice? Never a bit. He must have thought the thing was a bale of hay because he tried to eat it. And now he simply won't practice unless he's watched. Acts as though he didn't know which was the bow and which the fiddle. So what do I do? Why I just put Big Babe in charge of the little rascal. Babe, you see, has been playing bass fiddles in elephant orchestras for fifty years. Maybe she can make him learn."

But whether Joe has graduated by the time the big show arrives is of no great consequence for, with or without him, the novelty of two all baby-troupes of elephants vieing in performance with two herds of big ones promises to be a great treat for the youngsters. This is the first time in history that five companies of elephants have been presented in one display. All will be in Mexia Thursday afternoon and night, Oct. 16.

THOUSANDS MEET SUNDAY AT HORN HILL FOR CONVENTION

HOSPITALITY IS TRUE TO OLD SOUTHLAND

Horn Hill was host to one of the largest gatherings Sunday which has ever assembled under auspices of the Limestone County Singing convention. All during the day, folks in autos, trucks and all sorts of vehicles came and went. The attendance was probably in excess of the 5,000 expected.

The good people of Horn Hill and Thelma worked hard to make the event a success. Many beeves were barbecued and the tables were heavily laden with every dish known to the Southland, prepared by the women of the community and served in the spirit of that "Help Yourself Hospitality" which has fostered fellowship, good will and brotherhood since the nation began.

Tom Daugherty of this place, President conducted the association in splendid fashion not permitting a dull moment or an idle moment while visiting classes from all over the county and singers from distant points quartets and representatives of music houses from many cities.

The welcome address was delivered in the morning by Miss Clara McKee who rendered a most pleasing number which was generously applauded. Dinner was served under the great tabernacle from 12 to 1:00, after which the convention began again. A. Garland Adair of the Mexia Daily News delivered the address responsive to the welcome.

We extend to the citizens of Horn Hill our thanks generously and nothing too singers for their fine spirit in all that Music had been designed as the science governing the proper relation of harmonious sound and sound. He quoted Hamblen, that American Philosopher who has thrilled the heartstrings of America for several years, who has written entitled "The sweetest song I ever heard was the one we may sing when I come in late" etc. The speaker centered his message around the letters used in Music. The "M" stands for "melody," the "U" for "unity," producing harmony; the "S" for "sound," the "I" for "inspiration" and the "C" for Christ and Country. He said of the music of the great Creator of nature awakens in the heart of man the same emotion, the world over, the sea, the whisper of the evening breeze, the hum of insect life, the babble of the brook, the thunder of the cascade, the scream of the tornado, the roar of the storm, the crash of the thunderbolt, all separate the soul from coarse material and send it careening to the very feet of Christ and likewise Music. The first letter in which could also stand for "Men" ends with "C" standing for Christ and Country. Mr. Adair said that it was the more gratifying to hear the great gospel hymns which were being sung so joyously, so heartfelt and so beautifully by the men and women who were participating in the Session of Song.

Miss McKenzie's address of welcome was as follow:

"How were the sunlight steps upon this place

How still we sit, and let the sounds of music

Creep in our ears; soft stillness and the day,

Persome, the fountains of sweet harmony.

The man that hath no music in himself,

Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,

Is fit for treasons, stratagems and spoil;

The motions of his spirit are dull as night,

And his affections dark as Erebus;

Let no such man be trusted."

Music has had a prominent place on the program of achievement in Texas. Limestone County is better because of the song of the pioneer. It cheered many a spirit in days when Texans were faced with the burden of blazing trails through a trackless land. Historians tell of the coming to this county of "prairie ships," long wagons covered with white canvas, drawn by from six to twelve oxen on either side of which strided stalwart forms with rifles on their shoulders, like rudders and on the inside was wife and healthy children and household goods, such as they were. Here they founded their homes, a barbed wire was stretched about the premises chosen, a strong cottage grew up where never before was human habitation, and there the busy housewife hummed and sang while the basis for our great county was laid.

That the citizens of this section have long been a singing people, lovers of music, is shown in the long and honorable history of the Limestone County Singing Association. For more than a quarter of a century, this organization has had its semi-annual convention, that have delighted and inspired thousands of men, women and children, living and dead, here and elsewhere.

The citizens of Horn Hill, therefore feel honored today in the assemblage here gathered. Its hospitality is yours; its homes are yours and its hearts are all tingling with the bells of joy because of this day, its opportunities to bind our people closer together into the indissoluble ties of fellowship and brotherly love and its inspiration which has already been ours.

There is a fable, somewhere, of the animal who declined a polite invitation to enter the Lions den, because through the entrance, he could not hear the murmur of sweet music.

Those here today are given a cordial welcome, which we know they will gladly accept, for the voice of music tells with unspeakable grandeur from this place today and we sincerely hope that the memories of this occasion will linger like the refrain of a sweet old hymn, however remote from Horn Hill the paths of the future may lead.

Our gathering here today is not for the purpose of winning the emoluments of fortune. We have not invited you to spend this season of song with us through any desires of unselfishness. We believe that one of the high purposes of the Limestone County Singing Convention is to inculcate a higher appreciation of the value and sacred obligations of American citizenship.

During the recent great war, when our soldier boys were being trained to sing as well as to fight, they were often reminded that a singing army is a conquering army. And now our country, we as peaceful citizens, for , an army of more than 110,000,000 people, must not forget that a singing people are a victorious people, and that if we but remain strong, devoted and true to the spirit of our songs, devoted and true to the spirit of our songs, our homeland will continue "foremost in the files of time."

Thus we congratulate you upon your gathering today and again say "Thrice Welcome, one and all."

COLLEGE STATION, Oct. 13.—With one of the most promising exhibitions of horses and cattle, in the pink of condition for showing, Texas A. & M. has been forced to withdraw all entries to the American Royal exhibition, Kansas City, and the International Exposition at Chicago because of the hoof and mouth disease situation in southern Texas.

Before the animals were taken off special fitting rations, preparatory to being sent to the Dallas State fair, officials held a local showing attended by College Station and Bryan residents.

LIFE'S POSITIVE SIDE STRESSED BY MODERATOR SUNDAY

Rev. Giles H. Hogan D. D., of Waxahachie Moderator of the Synod of Texas filled the pulpit at The Central Presbyterian Church Sunday morning.

The local Pastor Rev. Victory K. Aubrey introduced the speaker most feelingly mentioning the fact that Bro. Hogan was one of his college-day pastors and that all the student body loved him most dearly and that it gave him a personal pleasure to have him deliver a message from the Inspired word on such an occasion. Rev. Hogan took as his text the words of the apostle "to me to live is Christ, to die is to gain?"

He stressed the positive side of life and it's great importance in service to Christ and Christianity. To illustrate this point he used a most homely and yet a most striking example. That of the tiniest insect as he plies his daily life. The speaker brought out the fact that the smallest of God's Creatures and the lowest of life seem to have a mission in life, seem to be on an errand of some purport and there is a positive compelling manner about their every movement and what a lesson this should and does give men.

The negative means nothing in life—you can refrain from all evil and yet not be a christian or one worthy of the name. His closing remarks referred to the end of a Christian—to the well spent life and "the death of satisfaction"

Mention should be made of the music which was so well rendered and gave an air of inspiration to the services. Mrs. E. M. Strange sang a solo number "Thy Will Be Done" joined by the choir in the chorus. Special mention should be given the male voices in this particular number as they handled this difficult number most pleasingly. Same being under the direction of Mrs. Allen L. Hatch.

MAE MURRAY COMING IN MEXICAN PICTURE

Mae Murray, the Metro star is at the National Theatre today in her latest picture, "Mademoiselle Midnight," which is said to give her the best role she has ever had. The story, written by Carl Harbaugh and John Russe,, concerns the daughter of a Mexican ranch owner, who is afflicted with an odd mignight madness. With this as a premise, the film works up to many thrilling moments. Miss Murray has an opportunity to wear gowns of the Spanish style and she introduces some sensational dances.

Monte Blue heads the supporting cast, which also includes Robert McKim, Robert Edeson, J. Sainpolis, Otis Harlan, Nigel de Brulier, and Nick de Ruiz. Oliver T. March was the photographer. "Mademoiselle Midnight" is presented by Tiffany Productions, of which M. H. Hoffman is general manager and Robert Z. Leonard, director general. It released by Metro.

No Baylor Queen At State Fair

WACO, Oct. 13.—Baylor University didn't send a "queen" to the all-collegiate circus at the Dallas State Fair, Oct. 8.

The reason: because dragging a mean trilby about dance floors is absolutely banned at the north Texas school, and dancing was a feature of the fair program.

Faculty members of Baylor put the lid on co-ed participation at the Dallas celebration, it is said.

As I see it, the main hope for a moral regeneration of modern politics lies in the university remaining loyal to uncompromising truth and in the church remaining loyal to uncompromising ideals. — Glenn Frank.

The WELL DRESSED AMERICAN

British Heir to Throne Confirms the Correct Men's Fashion for Fall.

THE Prince of Wales has left our shores, but his influence on men's clothes will stay with us for many moons. What the heir to the British throne wore while here was secondary only to what H. R. H. did. Staid and conservative newspapers printed columns describing what Long Island's royal guest wore every minute of his stay at Syosset. Thousands of pictures were printed in as many newspapers in every city of our land, giving definite pictorial information of Wales' hats, suits, shoes, shirts and neckwear.

The influence of the Prince of Wales as a leader of men's fashions is consistently recognized both in this country and in England. But the Prince didn't literally introduce new men's styles. What he did was to place the stamp of his royal approval on the present attire of well dressed Americans. There are many things which Americans admire in this likable prince of the blood royal; for instance, those of us who abhor ceremony cannot but admire the Prince for his wearing of a blue shirt and soft collar to match when he called upon the highest executive of the United States at Washington.

For the man with an eye on the current trend of fashion, there are several suit models of English origin, which will particularly suit his fancy. A few of the advanced models convey a perfectly straight unbroken line—a style dedicated to the college dresser.

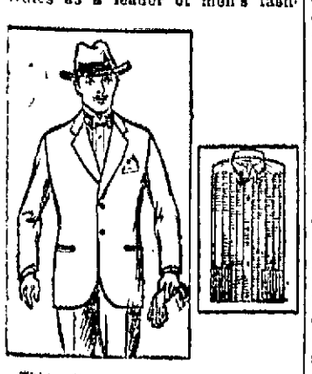
The English mode retains its leadership and the Fall models are presented in many new developments. The wide, straight trousers, blunted vest, ventless coat and wider shoulders are now firmly entrenched as the most correct vogue of the hour. Striped gray, and blue double-breasted jacket suits have been observed on all avenues and boulevards where men of good sartorial appearance are expected to be seen.

The Prince was seen in both blue, and gray pencil striped suits while sojourning in Syosset. It is only natural that Fall and Winter will see more double-breasted suits than Spring and Summer.

So far as overcoats are concerned, there are a wealth of fabrics, colors and styles offered to men who would envelop themselves in warm but stylish garments. One model which has already been seen in display windows is tailored of a new weather-resisting fabric and is the result of several years of investigations in the field of proofed textiles. The material is made and weather-proofed in Scotland of long-fiber Australian wool. The special weaving process insures a security from mists and showers. A rich, deep, softly woven face is supported by a hard-finished worsted back. It is an easy, straight-hanging Laird garment and provides for "year-round" service.

The secret of a well dressed man is color harmony and becoming style. The selection of blending colors, particularly in clothing and hats, is vitally important. The thoroughly furnished men's wardrobe should have at least three hats—one for business, another for informal occasions, and still another for motoring and sports wear. The felt hat, in various shades of brown and gray, with or without the turned-down brim in front, is, of course, much in vogue at the present writing. The derby, naturally, has its place for evening wear.

Colored shirts and stiff and soft collars to match are still being worn by the men who aren't afraid to affect a bit of color. The latest thing in shirts is a semi-stiff pleated bosom of solid color with cross pencil stripes of a deeper hue. This innovation has the soft attached French cuffs and stiff colored collar to match or may be worn with a Piccadilly white collar with bow tie.



This two-button, single-breasted jacket suit has pockets which are piped and carry no flaps. A new style shirt has a semi-stiff pleated bosom with cross stripes.

Judicial Report Synod Approved

Mexia, Tex., Oct. 10, 1924.

The Judicial Commission of the Synod of Texas of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., met with Revs. F. H. Ford, Garland Shell, B. G. Taylor, R. R. Crockett, C. W. Yates, W. C. Baber and George W. Fender and Elder J. W. Crudington, present. The Constituting prayer was offered by Rev. R. R. Crockett, Rev. Geo. W. Fender was elected Secretary. A committee to formulate the findings was appointed as follows: F. H. Ford, J. W. Cudgington and Geo. W. Fender.

The time for the hearing of the case entitled J. W. Beck, et al, vs the Presbytery of Dallas was made at 3 p. m. today and each side was given two hours for presenting the argument.

It was agreed that the sessions should be executive with only the members of the Commission, the counsels on each side and such parties as the counsels might name as desirable to be admitted.

The complaint in the case was read and found in order. The answer of the Respondents was read. A motion was made by Elder Carpenter and was written into the stenographic report.

The hearing was begun after the discussion of various phases of the case. Rev. S. M. Templeton opened for the complainants. Elder Joe E. Lawther spoke for the Respondents, followed by Elder R. E. Seay. Recess was taken until 7:30 p. m.

The commission resumed work at 7:30 p. m. Rev. R. E. Joiner spoke for the complainants. Rev. L. D. Young was given the privilege of addressing the commission, which he did. Elder Lewis T. Carpenter spoke for the Respondents after which the arguments were closed by Rev. S. M. Templeton. Adjournment was taken until 9:30 a. m. tomorrow.

October 11, 1924.

The Judicial Commission of Synod met on October 11th at 8:30 a. m. with members present as on yesterday, opened with prayer by Rev. W. C. Baber. The findings are as follows:

We, your Judicial Commission, having had referred to us with power as in Judicial cases the complaint of J. W. Beck, et al, vs the Presbytery of Dallas, beg to report as follws:

This case originated in the Presbytery of Dallas, taking cognizance of reports the lack of peace and harmony in the City Temple Church, the Presbytery ordering the session of said church to concert such measures as might restore and heal the internal dissensions of the congregation. This failing to bring about the desired results, a minority of the congregation petitioned the Presbytery of Dallas to dissolve the pastoral relation between Rev. L. D. Young, D. D. and the City Temple church on the ground that this was the only condition on which harmony culd be restored. At a call session of the Presbytery held at Dallas on June 4th and 5th, 1924, the said petition was received, filed and discussed. Pending this discussion the Presbytery approved the report of the session of the City Temple church, this report having been previously filed. Previous to the adoption of this report a resolution to hear the controversy and to give all parties a fair and impartial hearing was voted down. The effect of the adoption of the report of the session covering material involved in this controversy and referred to as the Carpenter Resolution, together with the voting down of the proposed action known as the Sneed Resolution was to deny the petitioners their prayer and to adjudicate the controversy against the petitioners without a hearing. From this action certain members of the Dallas Presbytery complained to this Synod and petitions for relief.

We, your Judicial Commission, unanimously find that the Presbytery erred in its action in denying the petitioners their prayers in voting down the Sneed Resolution.

The Presbytery in the second place erred in adjudicating the controversy raised by the petition of said minority in adopting the report of the session of City Temple covering what is referred to as the Carpenter Resolution without first hearing the facts in controversy.

Therefore we sustain the complaint in the matters above stated and order the Presbytery to meet in special session at Richardson, Texas, on November 11th, 1924, at 1:30 p. m. and then and there to proceed to hear the controversy according to the laws and usage of our church.

In view of our findings as above state, the other matters referred to in this complaint are not properly before us for adjudication.

Respectfully submitted,
F. H. FONE, Moderator.

ATTESTED:
G. W. FEUDS, Clerk.

The minutes were read and approved. Adjournment was taken with prayer led by Rev. B. G. Taylor.

SEEK $7,000,000 FOR NEAR EAST

CHICAGO, Oct 13.—Representatives of the Near East Relief from all parts of the United States are meeting in Chicago this week to submit reports of the past year's work and to make plans for raising a $7,000,000 budget during the coming year. Delegates from six foreign countries will present fresh reports of the work which the organization is doing overseas.

The convention meets at the Hotel Windermere and its sessions will continue for three days, concluding with a public dinner of 1,500 plates at the Hotel La Salle. Several announcements of large gifts to the organization are expected during the convention.

Charles V. Vickrey, president of the International Near East Association, which is affiliated with the League of Nations, has just returned from the annual meeting of the international orgatization, and will be one of the chief speakers at the convention. Plans will be discussed for the observance on Dec. 7 of Golden Rule Sunday, a day set apart by all civilized countries for the furtherance of international peace based on the Golden Rule. The observance in America will be under the direction of Near East Relief.

The general report of the national treasurer, as it will be submitted to the convention, shows total disbursements during the year 1923 of $9,480,000. The organization closed the year with a deficit of $648,000, which has since been slightly reduced. Since its organization, the Near East Relief has appropriated for its overseas work more than $69,000,000, of which $18,300,000 has been spent in Russian Armenia, $21,760,000 in Turkey, $9,810,000 in Syria and Palestine, and $7,540,000 in Persia and Mesopotamia.

Prince of Wales' "Little Gray Home in the West," Canada

THE PRINCE'S THOROUGHBRED SHEEP

After having enjoyed about as much privacy as the proverbial goldfish during the international polo games near New York, the Prince of Wales retired to the quiet and seclusion of his Canadian "Little Gray Home in the West," 25 miles from High River, Alberta, a station on the Canadian Pacific, to rest, recreate and work far from curious crowds, reporters, still photographers and "movie" men. It is very pleasant, no doubt, to be the most popular young man in the world, but about once a year the rolling hills and rich prairie land of his "E. P. Ranch" call the Prince of Wales, Baron Renfrew or "Davy Windsor," as they refer to H. R. H. in Alberta, back to the land.

The prince is a real farmer and rancher, and is honestly endeavoring to improve the breed of horses, sheep and cattle in Western Canada. His pure-bred, imported animals and their offspring have won many prizes in competition at live stock shows in Western Canada, not because they were from the royal ranch, but because they were the very best exhibited. Since he bought his 4,100 acre ranch in Alberta in 1919, the prince has been sending to it the best stock he could secure in Great Britain, and every year he sells at auction the surplus animals for the benefit of live stock breeders in the western provinces. The Earl of Minto, who has a big ranch near-by, does the same thing. Also, King George loans the prince some of his best animals for the stud.

"He's a neighborly kid," said one of the members of the Alberta Shorthorn Breeders Association. "When he comes out here we don't chase him as they do in other places. We just let him ride, and next thing you know he has all of us neighbors in as his guests, and meets us just as a neighbor. He wants to meet all the ranchers who are his neighbors, and there isn't a thing about ranching he doesn't want to know. His ranch is no fad. He is running it for the benefit of Canada first, and second for the purpose of making the "E. P. Ranch" a business venture, just as any level-headed man would do. When he is on the ranch he wears a 'ten gallon hat,' the same as all of the cowboys, and he does his work daily like any other ranch hand. 'Regular feller,' that's what we call him, 'regular feller!'"

Many familiar weapons take their names from their inventors. The Bowie knife, Gatling gun, Mauser rifle and Colt revolver all perpetuate the name of the person who first thought of them.

W. S. Banks was in Dallas Sunday.

MOONSHINERS ARE GIVEN DEATH SENTENCES

GIANT ZEPPELIN DUE TO REACH AMERICA WEDNESDAY

NO MISHAP YET IN CROSSING FROM BERLIN TO U. S.

By CARL D. GROAT.
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, Oct. 13.—Speeding safely 1,600 miles from her starting point at Friederichshafen, the giant Zeppelin ZR-3 reached the Azores this afternoon and passed high overhead above the little group on the steadily pursuing her westward course toward America.

Wireless reports reached Friederichshafen that the dirigible, making good time had arrived at the Azores at approximately 2 p. m. and entinued on her way.

The Zeppelin's course takes her on another 1,600 mile leg to Bermuda, where she turns northward to Lakehurst, N. J.

Spanish stations relayed messages reporting the passing of the airplane.

Slipping through cloud and sunshine like a great silver wreath, the Zeppelin ZR-3 was high over the Atlantic Ocean today headed for America on a southwesterly course.

Everything was well with the giant dirigible, which should reach Lakehurst, N. J., Wednesday, the ZR-3 was behind schedule when last reported but was proceeding steadily on her course, at a speed that averaged about 60 miles an hour. Early today she reported she had "hit it up" to 90 miles an hour.

Leaving Freiderichshafen, mother nest of Zeppelins for a quarter of a century this latest and possibly last of the brood that was to make Germany supreme in the air, swung westward over France early Sunday morning.

The start, in a dripping fog, was made at 6:40 a. m.

For a time the ZR-3's pilot, Dr. Eckener, head of the Zeppelin works, hesitated as to his course, the wireless chattering busily with land stations. Then he headed for Belfort, France, and crossed France, the northern tip of Spain, the Bay of Biscap and headed out to sea.

When last reported early today, the Zeppelin was about 600 miles from the Azores. (She probably had covered nearly one-third of her journey by 8. a. m. Eastern standard time today.)

It was about 3 a. m. Berlin time that the airship reported making 90 miles an hour while Dr. Eckener messaged that one time, over a shore stretch on Sunday, the ZR-3 made 130 miles an hour. This was with the aid of a strong wind, however. At 5 a. m. Berlin time the Zeppelin called for the weather report from the Hamburg Sea Observatory.

An hour later a report was received that a vessel had sighted the ZR-3 at 4 a. m. G. M. T. a quarter of the way between the North Corner of Spain and the Azores."

At 11 a. m. the Hamburg Sewarts, had not received the reprt which the Zeppelin was to send out at 8 a. m. and it was believed that the Sea station had lost touch with the airship. (Washington advices said contact with the ZR-3 would not be established by American Government radio stations until the craft was within 1,500 miles of the United States.

The Azores are 1,600 miles from Bermuda which is about 650 miles from Lakehurst, N. J.)

LA SALLE GIN BLOWS UP INJURING J. D .WILLIAMS

J. D. Williams was seriously injured Friday at LaSalle when the gin plant at that place was demolished by a boiler explosion in the engine room. The cause of the blow up is supposed to have been due to a dry boiler. The other ginners escaped with only minor bruises. He was a young man a veteran of the world's war and faced the disaster calmly, making his exit from the gin stand room through a hole and afterward fell unconscious on the gin lot. It was found that he had been hit by a brick, the force of which seemed to have been near his kidneys. His condition was a subject of much concern Saturday. A mule was killed in the explosion.

Sunday Closed Synod In Mexia

Sunday was the last and biggest day of the 1924 Synod which was held in Mexia, beginning Wednesday of last week.

All of the churches of the city were occupied by visiting ministers of the U. S. A. Presbyterian church.

Special music, special sermons and great crowds featured the day, at both morning and evening hours.

In the afternoon, Dr. Booth Smith of Los Angeles delivered a sermon to a joint gathering at the Methodist church. The large edifice was taxed to take care of the assembled throng. He spoke hurriedly, as he had to catch the train for Los Angeles at 3:45 in order to reach his home church for the celebration of the eighth anniversy of his pastorate there. His subject was "The Program of a Progressive Life."

Quite a few of the delegates remained over until Monday and are leaving on all trains. All who were here are loud in their praise of the hospitality of Mexia.

ANATOLE FRANCE MOURNED TODAY BY ALL PARIS

(By United Press)

PARIS, Oct. 13.—Anatole France is dead and all Paris today mourned his passing.

"Throughout the civilized world today," says the Echo de Paris, summing up Parisian opinion of the beloved writer, "all those who love beauty in the world and who appreciate royalty of the spirit, are in mourning."

The author of Thais and Le Jongleur De Notre Dame passed away at Tours Sunday after a long illness. He was 80 years old and had lived a long full life, rich in literary activity.

Funeral arrangements have not been announced pending opening of the author's last testament today. The body is laid out in a plain white night shirt, in accordance with M. France's wish.

"I'll never see you again," he told his wife just before he died, evidently clinging to his well known atheistic beliefs to the last.

The press today paid him unanimous homage, asserting he will live in history as one of France's greatest literary figures, a writer who carried on the glory of France literary tradition of Chataubriand, Victor Hugo and Benan.

The body of M. France must be placed in the Bantheon along with that of other great men, says Quotidien, the left organ and Le Journal asserts:

"Regardless of the fact that at present a party opinion or cult claims Anatole France, French literature can mourn him in superiority to this melee."

M. France's real name was Jacques Anatole Thibault. He was the son of a royalist book seller and was born in Paris April 16, 1844.

HOW TO VOTE SPLIT BALLOT

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 11.—In an opinion requested by John Marshall of Sherman, the attorney general's department Saturday outlining how a "scratched" ballot may be voted at the November election said: "The law would not be violated if a voter marks out all the tickets on the official ballot except the democratic and republican tickets and then marks out all the names on the republican ticket except the one such voter desires to vote for and also scratches out the name of the person on the democratic ticket for whom he does note desire to vote. Such a vote should be counted for all the democrat so voted for and for the republican so voted for.

"Where no agreement or proposal to vote for the person on the second marked ticket has been entered into or made, and no request has been made to the person receiving or securing such marked ticket to vote for the person on the marked ticket, the law would not be violated by the preparation of a sample marked ballot for distribution among the voters as circulars or for publication in newspapers showing the voters how they may lawfully vote for the democratic presidential electors and other nominees except for governor and also the republican candidate for governor.

"THE LIGHTS THAT DID NOT FAIL"

"Cabin watchmen and cabin patrols on duty in the night time on all vessels with staterooms shall have in their possession while on such patrol duty a suitable and efficient dry-battery flashlight."—General Rules and Regulations of the United States Steamboat Inspection Service.

"LET there be light!"

A fragment from Genesis is Uncle Sam's text in the mandates of the Board of Supervising Inspectors of the American Steamboat Inspection Service.

They rule, these Inspectors, for the safety of all citizens traveling in vessels of American register, whether on river, lake or ocean. And, because tragedies on the river occur oftener at night, they have drawn from experience in demanding that every passenger ship under their jurisdiction shall be equipped with extraordinary lighting facilities.

Not sufficient is the ordinary lighting system run by the ship's dynamos. Accident has too often put it out of commission, as witness the collision in Long Island Sound last July between the Eastern Steamship Company's liner Boston and the oil tanker Swift Arrow.

Nor is it enough that an auxiliary lighting system be ready for use in case of failure of the main lighting plant. Again is the Long Island Sound disaster evidence of the need of greater safety measures.

Demand a Flashlight

Thus it is that the Inspectors demand a pocket flashlight be carried by all watchmen and cabin patrols. No damage to dynamos or auxiliary lighting plants can extinguish the beam of light whose power is found in dry batteries held in the hand.

In that crash in the fog on Long Island Sound—where four lives were lost—the flashlight, as an emergency means of life-saving, had its most recent opportunity to demonstrate its worth. The searchlight from the tanker, standing by after its prow had gouged into the Boston's hull, provided the illumination for launching most of the liner's boats. On the far side, however, where the superstructure interposed a barrier to the searchlight ray, it was the beam from a flashlight which made possible the lowering of two humanity-laden craft to the bosom of the water.

Reason for Ruling

The occupants of those two frail boats, thankful that night to have the comforting beam played upon them, may have wondered how the flashlight came to be on board. To say a regulation requires it is scarcely sufficient. The Steamboat Inspectors, as has been said, draw from experience in specifying equipment.

That there were flashlights on the Boston; that there are flashlights on every passenger vessel in the American marine goes back almost five years—back to the night of October 28, 1919, when the steamer Muskegon, in a blinding lake storm, went crashing into the pier-head at Muskegon, Michigan.

Loss of the Muskegon

The Muskegon was lost that wild night, and many a life was snuffed out when she was battered to pieces on the pier-head, but lives were saved, and the saving was by the kindly fortune which prompted the assistant light-keeper from the Muskegon lighthouse to have in his possession a small pocket flashlight.

The story is still told around the Great Lakes, a story of intrepid courage on the part of both passengers and crew. The coincidence alone would recall the tale—the steamer Muskegon lost at Muskegon—but the theme is always the same—how a tiny flashlight guided men and women and children to safety down a sheer slide of eleven feet from the crumbling hull of the doomed steamer to the safety of stone pier-head.

Wedged to Pier

When the Muskegon ran afoul of the pier-head, her paddle wheel caught in the stone-end section of the jutty She was one of the old side-paddle type, a fact which aided in the preservation of many on board. With the starboard paddle wheel thus wedged, her starboard guard overhanging the pier, the Muskegon had a list of from thirty to forty-five degrees to port. This list brought the steamer's side to, a corresponding angle to the pier.

The height from the pier to the cabin deck was about eight feet, with a protection rail of about three feet, making a slide of eleven feet. About midway, the main rail projected enough to afford a step for those sliding down, while a hauled-up fender offered a slight help in alighting on the pier.

The Flashlight's Value

But all this was in darkness, a black night made more awesome by the roar of water and storm and the crashes which denoted section after section of the wrecked steamer being carried away. No man knew what lay below him until the assistant light-keeper came out upon the pier-head, a small flashlight in his hand. He trained its beam upon that eleven foot slide of danger and, one by one, the survivors of the Muskegon came down to safety.

The Supervising Inspector of the Eighth District made a detailed report, not only of the wreck and its causes, but of the manner in which a flashlight had saved human lives, and the Board of Supervising Inspectors, at its next meeting, added to Section 15 of the General Rules and Regulations prescribed for ocean, coastwise, lakes, rivers—in fact, all vessels with staterooms—a paragraph devoted to flashlights. The new mandate became operative July 1, 1920.

Saving the Powhatan

Within a few months there was evidence of the importance of the Inspectors' new ruling. It came from the U. S. S. Powhatan, which was disabled two hundred miles off Halifax, the ship's lighting system being put out of commission by the same heavy seas which wrecked the propellers. Weak storage batteries were reserved for radio calls and flashlights were called into play to signal the ships which put towards the vessel in response to the distress calls.

Oil lanterns had first been tried on the Powhatan, but were extinguished as rapidly as they were lighted. The flashlights were impervious to wind or wave. Guided by the steady beams of light from the deck of the steamer, the rescue vessels were able to close in and take the disabled ship in tow to Halifax.

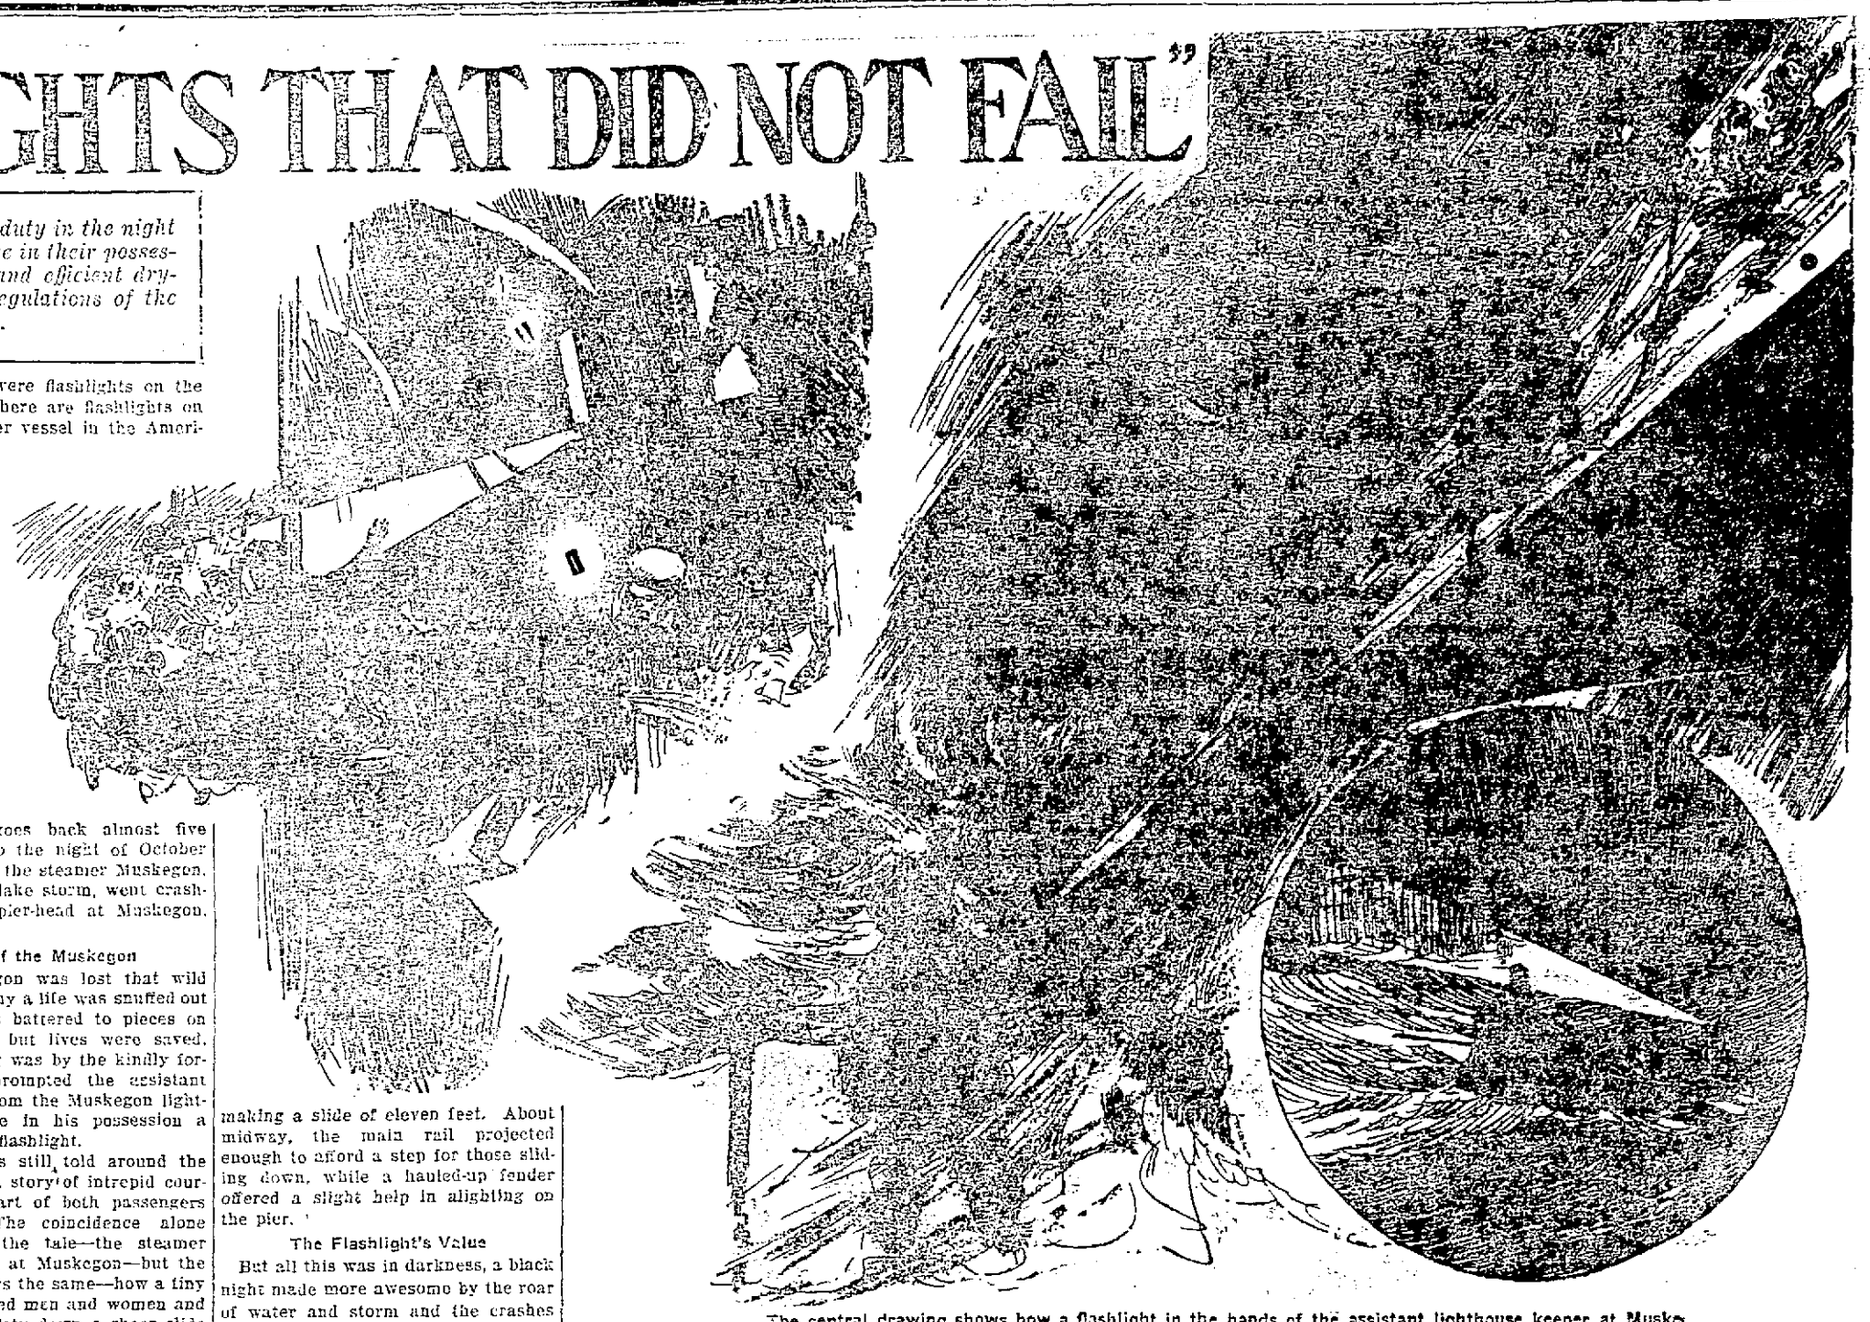
Other Evidence

Other instances since then have proved conclusively the value of the flashlight in saving life at sea. There is the case of the Obernai, which sank March 8 of the present year in Nova Scotian waters. Its crew owed their lives to the forethought of the first officer, who carried a pocket flashlight with him into one of the boats. The usual flares could not be lighted in the heavy seas, but the beam of the flashlight located the small boats for the rescue ships which came to the scene in response to the Obernai's last wireless calls.

Several weeks after the sinking of the Obernai, the Ward liner Santiago went down off Hatteras. One boat load of survivors was picked up, due entirely to the fact that they were able to signal with a flashlight carried by an officer. The other boat from the Santiago disappeared at sea.

Many instances have proved the soundness of that ruling made in 1919.

"Let there be light."



The central drawing shows how a flashlight in the hands of the assistant lighthouse keeper at Muskegon, Mich., guided passengers and crew of the wrecked lake steamer Muskegon to safety—the act which resulted in the flashlight becoming a compulsory part of the equipment of each cabin watchman and cabin patrol. On the left is shown the loading of one of the boats of the Eastern Steamship Company's liner Boston, after a collision in Long Island Sound, and the small insert on the right illustrates the way in which the crew of the Obernai was saved.

Good Government League Thinks Dr. Butte Will Win

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 9.—"George C. Butte will be the next governor of Texas if straw votes are any indication of public sentiment," according to John Marshall of Sherman, president of the Good Government Democratic League of Texas, which is espousing the candidacy of Mr. Butte for governor.

"Reports of straw votes taken at various representative gatherings have been forwarded to the headquarters of the Good Government Democratic League at Dallas," said Mr. Marshall, "and these votes more than speak for themselves of the trend of public opinion. The taking of these votes was entirely unsolicited by our headquarters and each can be substantiated as to its authenticity."

Quoting from the San Antonio Light of recent date, Mr. Marshall called attention to the following poll taken at a luncheon at the Conopus club of that city: "Dr. George C. Butte, candidate for governor of Texas, polled 94 votes and 'Ma' Ferguson 8 at the Conopus club luncheon. * * * The poll was taken following a speech by Jed C. Adams, democratic national committeeman from Texas.

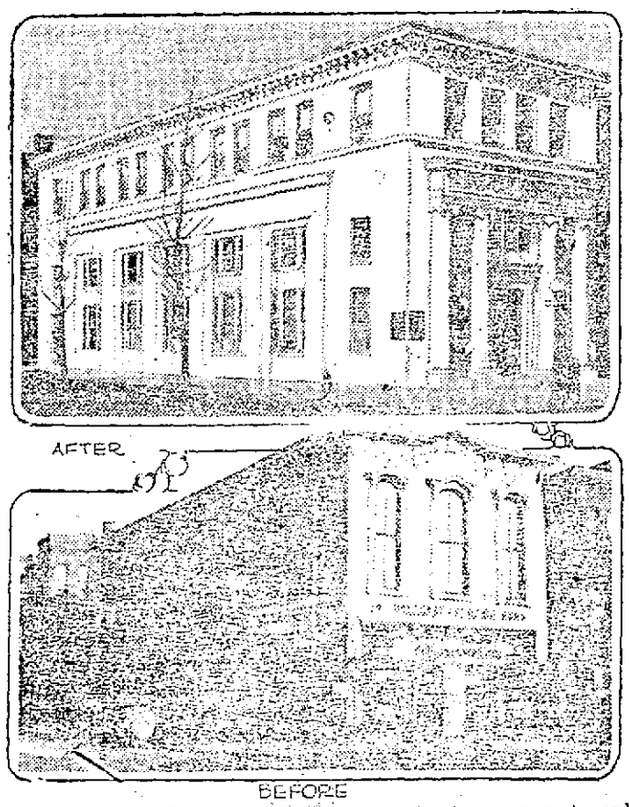
"A straw vote taken by the Amarillo News showed that Butte was the favorite about 7 to 1 in that section. At a meeting of 19 local doctors there, 17 were for Butte and 2 for Ferguson. At a meeting of the Lions' club of that city a poll showed 46 votes for Butte and 16 votes for Ferguson.

"In one department of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas railroad in Dallas, out of 15 employes, 13 were for Dr. Butte for governor.

"Traveling men throughout the State are opposed to Ferguson, and one drummer reported that he had talked with more than 50 fellow drummers within the past 10 days and found all of them opposed to the election of 'Ma' Ferguson.

Mr. Marshall has also been advised that in all sections of the State that branches of Good Government Democraic league are being formed. Many of the branches were already formed and functioning as non-partisan bodies before the organization of the Good Government Democratic league, and these are continuing their work under their original names. Others are being formed rapidly from among the democrats in their respective sections who are opposed to the election of Mrs. Ferguson, according to Mr. Marshall.

Old Buildings Are Being Transformed By the Magic Touch of the Architect



Bedford, Ind.—By the magic touch of the architect, hundreds of old buildings are being transformed into modern structures of rare beauty.

Through this skillful art of rehabilitation, an outstanding development of the 1924 construction boom, innumerable old brick buildings have been replaced by stone skyscrapers.

Trainloads of Indiana limestone have gone from the Bedford-Bloomington district this year for use in such alteration work. Architects have proved that refacing masonry structures, once deemed a task of rare skill, is today the most practical method of modernizing and beautifying old buildings at low cost.

Striking examples are found in all types of structures, ranging from the Hudson Motor Company building, Detroit, to the Peoples National Bank of Waterville, Maine.

The accompanying photographs show the remarkable transformation of the international Exchange bank, Washington, D. C., of which O. Harvey Miller was the architect.

J. D. Arrington Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe D. Arrington is reported quite low in Baylor Sanitarium Dallas from a throat operation. The family have the prayers and sympathy of the entire city and we hope to soon report this young son's full recovery.

KAISER DEMANDS HUGE SUMS FROM THE GERMAN PEOPLE

(By United Press)

BERLIN, Oct. 9.—Prussian Finance Minister von Richter is nettled with the business methods of former Kaiser Wilhelm II.

He has discovered that the Kaiser is insatiable in his demands upon the German republic, in connection with the settlement of his estates in Prussia.

Von Richter claims that in the course of negotiations covering five years the Kaiser has raised the ante on the Prussian government. The Kaiser's representatives, Excellenz von Berg, says the Hohenzollern house, including 40 members, needs 1,125,00 marks yearly income to keep the wolf from the door.

Von Richter responds that he in no wise desires to put the former Lord of Prussia on starvation rations but he estimates that 115,000 acres of valuable farm and forest land in Germany, plus a few castles, running into millions of marks in value, will yield several times the minimum requirements set by the Kaiser.

On the other hand, von Berg reached the conclusion that the Kaiser needed at least 400,000 acres and that the settlement proffered by the Prussian state would bring the royal family not over 1,000,000 marks a year.

All of which led von Richter somewhat testily to announce that he thought it just as well to have a show down in the courts with the Hohenzollern house. Whether this show-down will come is uncertain. The Kaiser's supporters hope von Richter makes good his threat, saying that the republic is destined to lose if the old time judges have a crack at the case.

Clayton States This Year Is A Democratic One

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 8.—"This is primarily the year of Democratic opportunity," says a statement issued from the office of W. L. Clayton, Cotton Exchange Building, Director of Finance for Texas, National Democratic Committee, and urges Texas Democratis to contribute to the campaign fund of John W. Davis, the presidential nominee, directing attention to the fact that but a few weeks remain in which to complete Texas' quota of the fund. To stress his point, Mr. Clayton points to the internal dissensions developing in the Republican ranks.

"The whole Republican party is in open revolt," the statement explains, referring to the public demand by Senator Brookhart (Rep), Iowa, that General Dawes be eliminated as the G. O. P. vice-presidential aspirant, and the Iowan's attack upon President Coolidge.

"There are more Republicans who take the same view as Brookhart, and that Senator's rebellion is due to his desire to get a man on the ticket more in sympathy with the agricultural interests of the country. Practically, it is true, the Republicans now have read Brookhart out of the party owing to his attack, but Charles W. Bryan, Democratic vice-presidential nominee, estimates that about 25 per cent of the Republican Senators also are demanding farm relief, listing them as coming from Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, Idaho, and "one in California."

"As to Nebraska, there is evident a genuine fear among Coolidge Republicans that Senator George Norris, who has hitherto kept silent as to Coolidge, will emulate Brookhart's example and that, should he do so, Nebraska may be regarded as definitely lost to the G. O. P.

"These developments in the Republican ranks are inevitable as Coolidge has never sought to placate the G. O. P. insurgent, but fought them in Congress and in the Cleveland convention, and to all practical cated from Republican campaign activities. All of which is grist for the mills of Democracy."

Just the Thing for Girlie

An Apron That Covers the Dress

One can play without thought of getting the dress soiled in this apron of checked gingham bound with mercerized cotton braid. It has patch pockets, a sash an' ever'thing.

This little model might be called a dress apron, were it not for the large armholes and slit sides, because it almost completely envelops the figure. It is certainly a most practical garment to slip on over a frock to protect it from the havoc of play.

The apron, for a girl of six years, calls for 1¼ yards of gingham 32 inches wide, with 3 yards of mercerized braid. The lower edge of the back and front of the apron are cut in round outline and there are little tab extensions at the sides of the front long enough to be tied in sash effect at the back. These extensions are caught together with a loop of self material.

As the first figure of the diagram shows, to make the loop for the sash cut a strip of gingham about 3 inches long and 2 inches wide. Sew the edges together, placing the two right sides together. Then turn the fold to the right side (Fig. II) and neatly turn under the edges at either end. To stitch the folds to the sides of the apron, turn under the ends as shown in the third figure of the diagram. The folds may be put on with machine stitching, or they may be sewed on securely by hand and then a few fancy stitches such as cross-stitch or fagoting added.

The pockets are cut with rounded lower edges to correspond with the line of the apron, the top edges being stitched with the braid. A number of interesting things may be done with the design. It may be carried out in cretonne, with braid used for the binding, or it may be made of unbleached muslin and the pockets embroidered in applique effect, taking the form of flowers or small animals.

NAMES SUGGEST'D FOR NEW GAS BAG COMING OVER SOON

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Thousands of suggestions for naming the ZR-3 upon its arrival here have been received from all over the United States by the Navy Department.

"President", "Coolidge," and "President Coolidge" are the suggestions of many. Indian names are popular, many of them proposed no doubt because Shenandoah, America's other giant dirigible bears an Indian name, meaning "Daughter of the Stars."

For this reason "Romona" (Daughter of the Sun), and "Nekomis" (Daughter of the Moon," are frequently mentioned. "Minnehaha" (Laughing Water) is another suggestion.

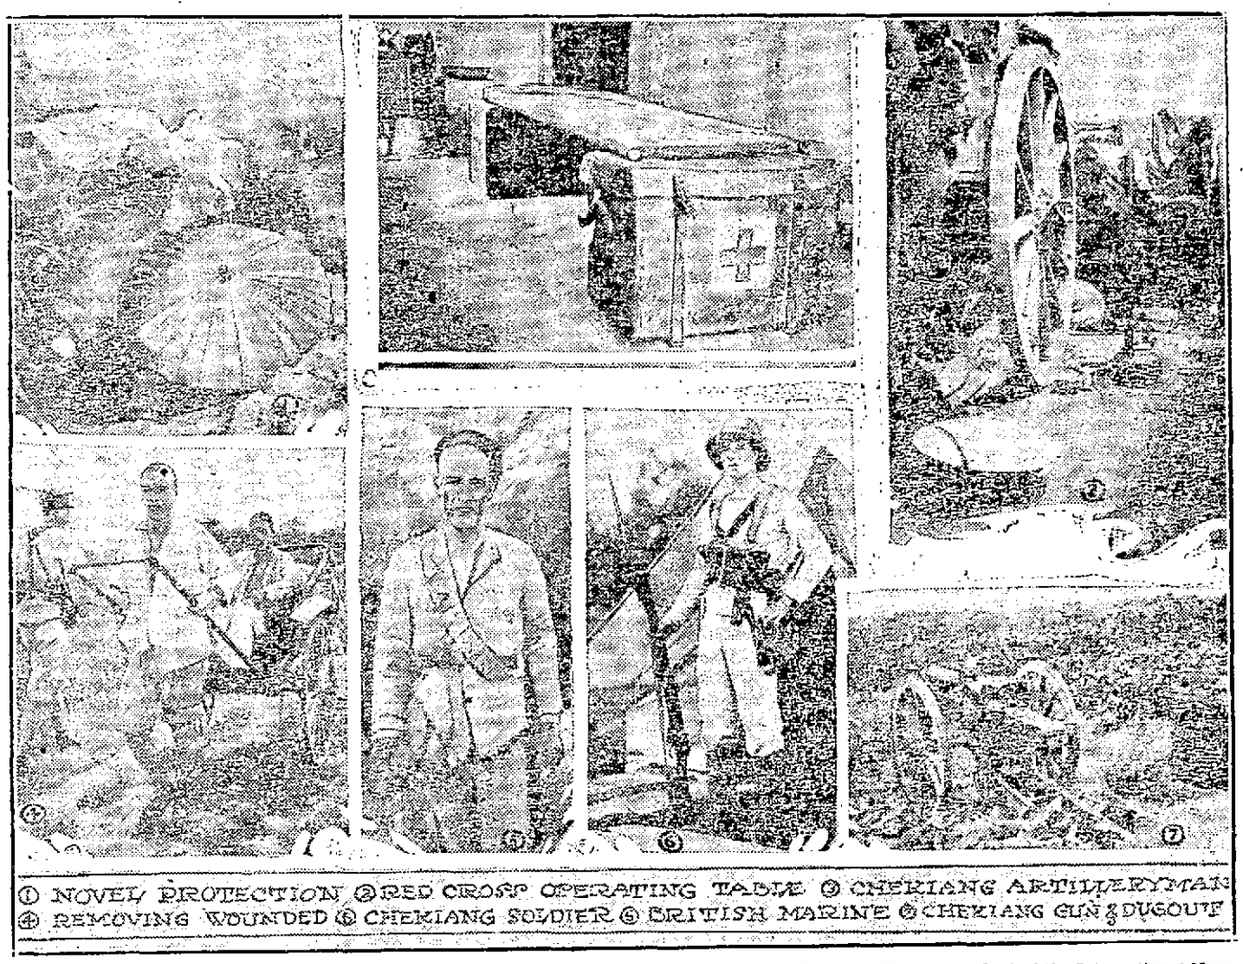
FIRST PICTURES OF CHINESE WAR, SNAPPED UNDER HEAVY FIRE.



① NOVEL PROTECTION ② RED CROSS OPERATING TABLE ③ CHEKIANG ARTILLERYMAN ④ REMOVING WOUNDED ⑤ CHEKIANG SOLDIER ⑥ BRITISH MARINE ⑦ CHEKIANG GUN & DUGOUT

These are the first pictures of the fighting for the possession of Shanghai, China, snapped by a staff correspondent of the International News Service. Believe it or not, Chinese soldiers carry their umbrellas into action, and in Figure No. 1, a Chekiang Province gunner defending the city may be seen seeking shelter under his in a trench on the Huangtu front. The Red Cross operating table on the same front was made from two Red Cross kit boxes and a door panel. The Chekiang artilleryman, under heavy fire, finds a safe berth under his gun. Despite the intensity of the fire, his tea kettle at the right was going merrily. The wounded are removed in rikshaws by conscripted coolies, who also must take up ammunition and food. The photograph of the Chekiang private was taken under rifle and machine gun fire, but he didn't seem to mind. British marines are ashore and encamped in Jessfield Park, outside the foreign settlement in Shanghai, to protect foreigners. This modern Chekiang gun, surrounded by empty cartridge cases, was fired many times at Huangtu. The Chinese guns are of German, French and Japanese manufacture.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

The number of telephones in a city; the number of electric light meters or gas meters, is almost as good as indicators of the growth or slump in population as a numerical census of the population.

Paul Kauhl, manager of the Mexia Oil & Gas Company, was asked the eternal question: "How's Business?"

"Well, business with us is good," he replied. "Our number of regular patrons, as measured by gas meters installed, increased last year about 25 per cent. Some of our company officials think that 1924 will show a 100 per cent increase, but to be conservative, I think a 50 per cent increase will be mighty good."

According to Mr. Kauhl, the average monthly bill for gas where used for household purposes like cooking and heating, runs around $2.00 in the summer and $6.00 in the winter. Truly, an economical fuel.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.—(Adv.)

"For Mexia, I WILL"

THE IMPORTANT THING

Rear Admiral Henry S. Wilson, superintendent of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, in submitting his annual report to Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, gives expression to an ideal that may be well considered by every American citizen, young and old.

He says: "As stated in my reports for 1922-23 the one single thing of great importance to the midshipmen is that they shall have instilled in them, perhaps unconsciously, but so thoroughly as to become an integral part of their makeup, a recognition of the Eternal Worth of Character."

Comment is superfluous. This educatonal axiom should be posted in every school room in America and in every home. Our people are taught to be "go-getters" and the men of achievement are held before them as examples. They are urged to get on in the world, to get position, to get wealth, to get power, but after all, life is a total loss unless the exhortation of the ancient philosopher is heeded,—"with all your getting, get Wisdom,"—which is just another way of saying, recognize the Eternal Worth of Character.

Thirteen years ago the custom of observing Fire Prevention Day throughout this country was established, when October 9th—anniversary of the Chicago conflagration of 1871—was set aside for that purpose. More recently it has been customary to observe the entire week which includes October 9th, to the end that a comprehensive program in keeping with the importance of the occasion may be placed in effect, the purpose of which is to impress the individual citizen with the fact that the teremndous fire waste is everybody's loss and everybody's responsibility, and that a great majority of the casualties and fires that occur may easily be avoided.

There is no mystery about Fire Prevention—it is a vital necessity. Fire Prevention is not a science—it is simply common sense.

October 5th to 11th has been designated as Fire Prevention Week this year. Will you be prepared to do your part?

* * * * *

Before the year is up, twenty five new homes will be in process of construction or completed at the Mexia Cotton Mills to take care of employees who will be here by Spring to begin working there when the whir of the textile industry is heard for the first time in Limestone County.

* * * * *

The expansion of the Glove Factory here is counted upon by everyone here who knows anything about it. J. K. Hughes stated recently, before he left for New York, that he expected this industry to develop into one of the biggest institutions in Texas and that at no distant date.

* * * * *

Smoking in mills, factories, warehouses and shops, stables, garages and outhouses, should be absolutely prohibited.

* * * * *

Electric flat irons should never be left with the current on.

* * * * *

Gasoline, naptha and similar volatiles for domestic cleaning should be used always in the open air and by daylight only, and never near any open flame.

* * * * *

Oily rags or waste, used in furniture polishing or any sort of cleaning, should be burned at once after using, as certain oils ignite spontaneously.

* * * * *

Fire prevention is as important as fire extinguishment. Fire departments should prevent fires as well as extinguish them.

* * * * *

Attics and cellars should be kept free from combustible accumulations.

Burning trash or autmun leaves too near buildings is dangerous.

Town Ne'er-Do-Well, Trained in Law, Acting as Own Judge, Banishes Self

By W. F. SULLIVAN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 9.—Bob Carruthers, town character of Liberty near here, has been banished forever.

In one of the most unusual sentences ever written in the court records, Carruthers, who by his weakness for liquor tossed away ability and the opportunity of establishing a reputation as an eloquent orator, recalled the wrath of his youth long enough to use his eloquence to pronounce his own banishment from Clay County.

The ne'er-do-well must abide by the decision of the court, his own decision—the last judge of the court has ruled.

A member of a wealthy family, [illegible] journal of early statesmen, educated [illegible] universities in the country, who dabbled in law, studied for the ministry, and who had the makings of a wonderful orator, regained possession of his silver tongue temporarily and meted out his fate of banishment.

It happened thus. Carruthers, who had been arrested on a charge of drunkenness, arranged his own bond and was ordered to appear in court for a preliminary hearing before Judge M. L. Swanner, Justice of the Peace of Clay County.

At the appointed hour for the hearing Judge Swanner was called to another part of the county for another hearing and unintentionally forgot about Carruthers. The latter was punctual and to his great surprise found the justice's chambers deserted save for the janitor, who was putting the tribunal in order.

Gathering the judicial hearing that was once a real part of that orderly er, Carruthers stepped to the judge's bench, seated himself in the chair and called his case. The janitor set his broom aside and sat as witness.

Carruthers, in the role of prosecuting attorney, stepped from the judicial platform and with powerful adjectives denounced the defendant in the case for his chronic drunkenness. The lone spectator in the courtroom had heard many arraignments but seldom had he heard a defendant given such an unmerciful flaying.

Then the plea of mercy came and the Carruthers of old, or rather as when he was young, reappeared. As attorney for the defense he waxed eloquent. His words were pathetic, his tone sympathetic and the effect touching. The janitor-witness wept.

Both prosecution and defense having rested their case after brilliant appeals pro and con, it was given to the judge for decision.

Ascending the bench "Judge" Carruthers decreed that the defendant, Bob Carruthers, should be banished forever from Clay County and the case was ended so far as the "court" was concerned. Lifting his head high, Carruthers walked proudly from the courtroom.

When the janitor recounted the strange proceedings to Judge Swanner and the clerk of the court, the judge declared: "My sentence shall stand."

Bob Carruthers, exile, has disappeared.

CONTENTMENT

OWEN FRIEND WATKINS

The light of day that rose in glorious splendor
And lured me on to grasp my hopes in life
Had now grown dim, and left the same old story
Of ceaseless grind and endless toil and strife;
While thus I sat, in lonely meditation,
Reviewing days an unkind fate had sent,
I fell asleep beneath the stars and moonlight
And had revealed the land of sweet content.

Two fairies came, attired in gold and purple,
To bear me to that land of perfect bliss
On Fancy's wings, and show me all its beauties
Relentless fate decreed that I should miss:
The anxious wish in all my dreams of pleasures,
Of things that bring contentment to my heart,
Were there revealed and placed in my possession
That I might know the gladness they impart.

Upon a hill arrayed by landscape artists
A mansion stood carved out of blended stone
With colonades of classic architecture
The hope and pride of avarice to own:
It's inner walls were decked with art and sculpture
And orient rugs lay thickly on its floors
For nought was spared, of gold and gifted science,
To build a home the yearning heart adores.

Its owner told of all his disappointments,
How luxury had hushed the voice divine,
Of love betrayed and wild, licentious, revels
Where Bacchus ruled to blot the holy shrine:
The pow'r of gold had swept away ambition
For nought was left to stir the holy flame
Surrounded there with all that man can conquer
With time to spend in idleness and shame.

In vain regret I turned from that dominion
To tread my path along the vale below
Where Nature's hand had mingled trees and flowers
Onverdured sod where streamlets gently flow;
There in a realm where God portrayed His glories
And sent the birds to sing eternal praise
An open glade disclosed a wood-hewn cottage
To welcome me to share its simple ways.

Around the hearth five happy children gathered
To learn and heed their parent's good advice.
Three sisters arms entwined with their two brothers
With love and faith reflected in their eyes:
No envied strife, no greed, no sensual passion
E'er hovered there to blot the holy charm
For God had sent the song of sweet contentment
To fill their souls with happiness so warm.

5 Herds of Elephants With Great Show Thurs.

Smart as elephants are known to be, there are "dumb-bells" among them.

Take Joe for example. Joe is the eighteen months old youngster of the twelve "Baby Bunting" elephants who are coming here to devour peanuts and perform with the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey circus. Joe just can't learn. Or it may be that Joe simply won't learn.

Frankly, George Denman, keeper of the forty-three adult elephants with the Greatest Show on Earth, has his doubts. So he is determined that Joe be given every possible chance.

"You see," Denman explains, "after I had taught the twelve babies to do a few simple tricks, I decided to form an orchestra. Marcella learned to play a horn in no time at all, Mary was soon beating a drum, and Bingo just loves to play the cymbals. It was decided to teach Joe the bass viol and so I had a small one made for him. But do you suppose he would practice? Never a bit. He must have thought the thing was a bale of hay because he tried to eat it. And now he simply won't practice unless he's watched. Acts as though he didn't know which was the bow and which the fiddle. So what do I do? Why I just put Big Babe in charge of the little rascal. Babe, you see, has been playing bass fiddles in elephant orchestras for fifty years. Maybe she can make him learn."

But whether Joe has graduated by the time the big show arrives is of no great consequence for, with or without him, the novelty of two all baby-troupes of elephants vieing in performance with two herds of big ones promises to be a great treat for the youngsters. This is the first time in history that five companies of elephants have been presented in one display. All will be in Mexia Thursday afternoon and night, Oct. 16.

THOUSANDS MEET SUNDAY AT HORN HILL FOR CONVENTION

HOSPITALITY IS TRUE TO OLD SOUTHLAND

Horn Hill was host to one of the largest gatherings Sunday which has ever assembled under auspices of the Limestone County Singing convention. All during the day, folks in autos, trucks and all sorts of vehicles came and went. The attendance was probably in excess of the 5,000 expected.

The good people of Horn Hill and Thelma worked hard to make the event a success. Many beeves were barbecued and the tables were heavily laden with every dish known to the southland, prepared by the women of the community and served in the spirit of that "Help Yourself Hospitality" which has fostered fellowship, good will and brotherhood since the nation began.

Tom Daugherty of this place, President, conducted the association in splendid fashion, not permitting a dull moment or an idle moment while singing classes from all over the county and singers from distant points, quarters and representatives of music houses from many cities.

The welcome address was delivered in the morning by Miss Clara McKenzie, presented in a most pleasing manner which won generous applause. Dinner was served under the great tabernacle from 12 to 1:00, after which the convention began again. A. Garland Adair of the Mexia Daily News delivered the address in response to the welcome.

After extolling the citizens of Horn Hill for their great generosity and lauding the singers for their fine singing, he said that Music had been defined as the science showing the proper relation of harmony, melody and sound. He quoted Hamlone, that American Philosopher who has tickled the heartstrings of America for several years, who last week declared "De sweetes' sound I ebah heard was de ole woman sporin wiben I comes in late at night." The speaker centered his message around the letter used in Music. The "M" stands for "melody;" the "U" for "unity," producing harmony; the "S" for "sound;" the "I" for "inspiration" and the "C" for Christ and Country. He said that the music of the great orchestra of nature awakens in the heart of man the same emotions, the world over, the aeolian whisper of the evening breeze, the hum of insects, the babble of the brook, the laughter of the cascade, the scream of the torrent, the roar of the storm, the crash of the thunderbolt, all separate the soul from things material and send it careening to the very feet of Christ and likewise Music the first letter in which could also stand for "Men" ends with "C" standing for Christ and Country. Mr. Adair said that it was, therefore, gratifying to hear the great gospel hymns which were being sung so joyously, so heartily, and so beautifully by the men and women who were participating in the Service of Song.

Miss McKenzie's address of welcome was as follows:

"How sweet the sunlight sleeps upon this place.
Here will we sit, and let the sounds of music
Creep in our ears; soft stillness and the day,
Becomes the touches of sweet harmony."
The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils;
The motions of his spirit are dull
as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus.
Let no such man be trusted."

Music has had a prominent place on the program of achievement in Texas. Limestone County is better because of the song of the pioneer. It cheered many a spirit in days when Texans were taxed with the burden of blazing trails through a tractless land. Historians tell of the coming to this county of "prairie ships," long wagons covered with white canvas, drawn by from six to twelve oxen; on either side of which strided stalwart forms with rifles on their shoulders, like rudders, and on the inside was wife and healthy children and household goods, such as they were. Here they founded their homes, a barbed wire was stretched about the premises chosen, a strong cottage grew up where never before was human habitation, and there the busy housewife hummed and sang while the basis for our great county was laid.

That the citizens of this section have long been a singing people, lovers of music, is shown in the long and honorable history of the Limestone County Singing Association. For more than a quarter of a century, this organization has had its semi-annual convention, that have delighted and inspired thousands of men, women and children, living and dead, here and elsewhere.

The citizens of Horn Hill, therefore feel honored today in the assemblage here gathered. Its hospitality is yours; its homes are yours and its hearts are all tingling with the bells of joy because of this day, its opportunities to bind our people closer together into the indissoluble ties of fellowship and brotherly love and its inspiration which has already been ours.

There is a fable, somewhere, of the animal who declined a polite invitation to enter the Lion's den, because through the entrance, he could not hear the murmur of sweet music.

Those here today are given a cordial welcome, which we know they will gladly accept, for the voice of music rolls with unspeakable grandeur from this place today and we sincerely hope that the memories of this occasion will linger like the refrain of a sweet old hymn, however remote from Horn Hill the paths of the future may lead.

Our gathering here today is not for the purpose of winning the emoluments of fortune. We have not invited you to spend this season of song with us through any desires of unselfishness. We believe that one of the high purposes of the Limestone County Singing Convention is to inculcate a higher appreciation of the value and sacred obligations of American citizenship.

During the recent great war, when our soldier boys were being trained to sing as well as to fight, they were often reminded that a singing army is a conquering army. And now our country, we as peaceful citizens, for[illegible] an army of more than 110,000,000 people, must not forget that a singing people are a victorious people, and that if we but remain strong, devoted and true to the spirit of our songs, devoted and true to the spirit of our songs, our homeland will continue "foremost in the files of time."

Thus we congratulate you upon your gathering today and again say "Thrice Welcome, one and all."

LIFE'S POSITIVE SIDE STRESSED BY MODERATOR SUNDAY

Rev. Giles H. Hogan D. D., of Waxahachie Moderator of the Synod of Texas filled the pulpit at The Central Presbyterian Church Sunday morning.

The local Pastor Rev. Victory K. Aubrey introduced the speaker most feelingly mentioning the fact that Bro. Hogan was one of his college-day pastors and that all the student body loved him most dearly and that it gave him a personal pleasure to have him deliver a message from the Inspired word on such an occasion. Rev. Hogan took as his text the words of the apostle "to me to live is Christ, to die is to gain?"

He stressed the positive side of life and it's great importance in service to Christ and Christianity. To illustrate this point he used a most homely and yet a most striking example. That of the tinnest insect as he plies his daily life. The speaker brought out the fact that the smallest of God's Creatures and the lowest of life seem to have a mission in life, seem to be on an errand of some purport and there is a positive compelling manner about their every movement and what a lesson this should and does give men.

The negative means nothing in life—you can refrain from all evil and yet not be a christian or one worthy of the name. His closing remarks referred to the end of a Christian—to the well spent life and "the death of satisfaction."

Mention should be made of the music which was so well rendered and gave an air of inspiration to the services. Mrs. E. M. Strange sang a solo number "Thy Will Be Done" joined by the choir in the chorus. Special mention should be given the male voices in this particular number as they handled this difficult number most pleasingly. Same being under the direction of Mrs. Allen L. Hatch.

MAE MURRAY COMING IN MEXICAN PICTURE

Mae Murray, the Metro star is at the National Theatre today in her latest picture, "Mademoiselle Midnight," which is said to give her the best role she has ever had. The story, written by Carl Harbaugh and John Russe,, concerns the daughter of a Mexican ranch owner, who is afflicted with an odd mignight madness. With this as a premise, the film works up to many thrilling moments. Miss Murray has an opportunity to wear gowns of the Spanish style and she introduces some sensational dances.

Monte Blue heads the supporting cast, which also includes Robert McKim, Robert Edeson, J. Sainpolis, Otis Harlan, Nigel de Brulier, and Nick de Ruiz. Oliver T. Marsh was the photographer. "Mademoiselle Midnight" is presented by Tiffany Productions, of which M. H. Hoffman is general manager and Robert Z. Leonard, director general. I. released by Metro.

No Baylor Queen At State Fair

WACO, Oct. 13.—Baylor University didn't send a "queen" to the all-collegiate circus at the Dallas State Fair, Oct. 8.

The reason: because dragging a mean trilby about dance floors is absolutely banned at the north Texas school, and dancing was a feature of the fair program.

Faculty members of Baylor put the lid on co-ed participation at the Dallas celebration, it is said.

Those tiny teeth are a priceless gift—guard them well!

WRIGLEY'S is a wonderful help to keep teeth clean and sound, for it clears out the crevices, makes the mouth sweet and removes acid conditions from which most people suffer.

A prominent physician says: "It is surprising how free from decay the teeth can be kept by using gum after each meal."

WRIGLEY'S is good, not only for the teeth, but for the nerves and appetite and digestion, too.

The whole family should use

The WELL DRESSED AMERICAN

British Heir to Throne Confirms the Correct Men's Fashion for Fall.

THE Prince of Wales has left our shores, but his influence on men's clothes will stay with us for many moons. What the heir to the British throne wore while here was secondary only to what H. R. H. did. Staid and conservative newspapers printed columns describing what Long Island's royal guest wore every minute of his stay at Syosset. Thousands of pictures were printed in as many newspapers in every city of our land, giving definite pictorial information of Wales' hats, suits, shoes, shirts and neckwear.

The influence of the Prince of Wales as a leader of men's fashions is consistently recognized both in this country and in England. But the Prince didn't literally introduce new men's styles. What he did was to place the stamp of his royal approval on the present attire of well dressed Americans. There are many things which Americans admire in this likable prince of the blood royal; for instance, those of us who abhor ceremony cannot but admire the Prince for his wearing of a blue shirt and soft collar to match when he called upon the highest executive of the United States at Washington.

For the man with an eye on the current trend of fashion, there are several suit models of English origin, which will particularly suit his fancy. A few of the advanced models convey a perfectly straight unbroken line—a style dedicated to the college dresser.

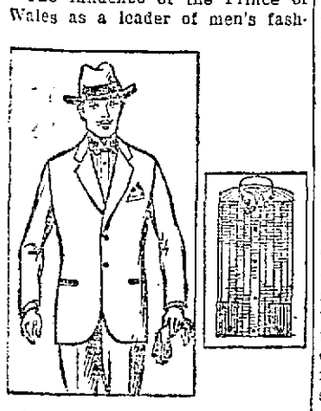
The English mode retains its leadership and the Fall models are presented in many new developments. The wide, straight trousers, blunted vest, ventless coat and wider shoulders are now firmly entrenched as the most correct vogue of the hour. Striped gray, and blue double-breasted jacket suits have been observed on all avenues and boulevards where men of good sartorial appearance are expected to be seen.

The Prince was seen in both blue, and gray pencil striped suits while sojourning in Syosset. It is only natural that Fall and Winter will see more double-breasted suits than Spring and Summer.

So far as overcoats are concerned, there are a wealth of fabrics, colors and styles offered to men who would envelop themselves in warm but stylish garments. One model which has already been seen in display windows is tailored of a new weather-resisting fabric and is the result of several years of investigations in the field of proofed textiles. The material is made and weather-proofed in Scotland of long-fiber Australian wool. The special weaving process insures a security from mists and showers. A rich, deep, softly woven face is supported by a hard-finished worsted back. It is an easy, straight-hanging Laird garment and provides for "year-round" service.

The secret of a well dressed man is color harmony and becoming style. The selection of blending colors, particularly in clothing and hats, is vitally important. The thoroughly furnished men's wardrobe should have at least three hats—one for business, another for informal occasions, and still another for motoring and sports wear. The felt hat, in various shades of brown and gray, with or without the turned-down brim in front, is, of course, much in vogue at the present writing. The derby, naturally, has its place for evening wear.

Colored shirts and stiff and soft collars to match are still being worn by the men who aren't afraid to affect a bit of color. The latest thing in shirts is a semi-stiff pleated bosom of solid color with cross pencil stripes of a deeper hue. This innovation has the soft attached French cuffs and stiff colored collar to match or may be worn with a Piccadilly white collar with bow tie.



This two-button, single-breasted jacket suit has pockets which are piped and carry no flaps. A new style shirt has a semi-stiff pleated bosom with cross stripes.

Judicial Report Synod Approved

Mexia, Tex., Oct. 10, 1924.

The Judicial Commission of the Synod of Texas of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., met with Revs. F. H. Ford, Garland Shell, B. G. Taylor, R. R. Crockett, C. W. Yates, W. C. Baber and George W. Fender and Elder J. W. Crudington, present. The Constituting prayer was offered by Rev. R. R. Crockett, Rev. Geo. W. Fender was elected Secretary. A committee to formulate the findings was appointed as follows: F. H. Ford, J. W. Cudgington and Geo. W. Fender.

The time for the hearing of the case entitled J. W. Beck, et al, vs the Presbytery of Dallas was made at 3 p. m. today and each side was given two hours for presenting the argument.

It was agreed that the sessions should be executive with only the members of the Commission, the counsels on each side and such parties as the counsels might name as desirable to be admitted.

The complaint in the case was read and found in order. The answer of the Respondents was read. A motion was made by Elder Carpenter and was written into the stenographic report.

The hearing was begun after the discussion of various phases of the case. Rev. S. M. Templeton opened for the complainants. Elder Joe E. Lawther spoke for the Respondents, followed by Elder R. E. Seay. Recess was taken until 7:30 p. m.

The commission resumed work at 7:30 p. m. Rev. R. E. Joiner spoke for the complainants. Rev. L. D. Young was given the privilege of addressing the commission, which he did. Elder Lewis T. Carpenter spoke for the Respondents after which the arguments were closed by Rev. S. M. Templeton. Adjournment was taken until 9:30 a. m. tomorrow.

October 11, 1924.

The Judicial Commission of Synod met on October 11th at 8:30 a. m. with members present as on yesterday, opened with prayer by Rev. W. C. Baber. The findings are as follows:

We, your Judicial Commission, having had referred to us with power as in Judicial cases the complaint of J. W. Beck, et al, vs the Presbytery of Dallas, beg to report as follws:

This case originated in the Presbytery of Dallas, taking cognizance of reports the lack of peace and harmony in the City Temple Church, the Presbytery ordering the session of said church to concert such measures as might restore and heal the internal dissensions of the congregation. This failing to bring about the desired results, a minority of the congregation petitioned the Presbytery of Dallas to dissolve the pastoral relation between Rev. L. D. Young, D. D. and the City Temple church on the ground that this was the only condition on which harmony culd be restored. At a call session of the Presbytery held at Dallas on June 4th and 5th, 1924, the said petition was received, filed and discussed. Pending this discussion the Presbytery approved the report of the session of the City Temple church, this report having been previously filed. Previous to the adoption of this report a resolution to hear the controversy and to give all parties a fair and impartial hearing was voted down. The effect of the adoption of the report of the session covering material involved in this controversy and referred to as the Carpenter Resolution, together with the voting down of the proposed action known as the Sneed Resolution was to deny the petitioners their prayer and to adjudicate the controversy against the petitioners without a hearing. From this action certain members of the Dallas Presbytery complained to this Synod and petitions for relief.

We, your Judicial Commission, unanimously find that the Presbytery erred in its action in denying the petitioners their prayers in voting down the Sneed Resolution.

The Presbytery in the second place erred in adjudicating the controversy raised by the petition of said minority in adopting the report of the session of City Temple covering what is referred to as the Carpenter Resolution without first hearing the facts in controversy.

Therefore we sustain the complaint in the matters above stated and order the Presbytery to meet in special session at Richardson, Texas, on November 11th, 1924, at 1:30 p. m. and then and there to proceed to hear the controversy according to the laws and usage of our church.

In view of our findings as above stated the other matters referred to in this complaint are not properly before us for adjudication.

Respectfully submitted,
F. H. FONE, Moderator.

ATTESTED:
G. W. FEUDS, Clerk.

The minutes were read and approved. Adjournment was taken with prayer led by Rev. B. G. Taylor.

Prince of Wales' "Little Gray Home in the West," Canada

THE PRINCE'S THOROUGHBRED SHEEP

After having enjoyed about as much privacy as the proverbial goldfish during the international polo games near New York, the Prince of Wales retired to the quiet and seclusion of his Canadian "Little Gray Home in the West," 25 miles from High River, Alberta, a station on the Canadian Pacific, to rest, recreate and work far from curious crowds, reporters, still photographers and "movie" men. It is very pleasant, no doubt, to be the most popular young man in the world, but about once a year the rolling hills and rich prairie land of his "E. P. Ranch" call the Prince of Wales, Baron Renfrew or "Davy Windsor," as they refer to H. R. H. in Alberta, back to the land.

The prince is a real farmer and rancher, and is honestly endeavoring to improve the breed of horses, sheep and cattle in Western Canada. His pure-bred, imported animals and their offspring have won many prizes in competition at live stock shows in Western Canada, not because they were from the royal ranch, but because they were the very best exhibited. Since he bought his 4,100 acre ranch in Alberta in 1919, the prince has been sending to it the best stock he could secure in Great Britain, and every year he sells at auction the surplus animals for the benefit of live stock breeders in the western provinces. The Earl of Minto, who has a big ranch near-by, does the same thing. Also, King George loans the prince some of his best animals for the stud.

"He's a neighborly kid," said one of the members of the Alberta Shorthorn Breeders Association. "When he comes out here we don't chase him as they do in other places. We just let him ride, and next thing you know he has all of us neighbors in as his guests, and meets us just as a neighbor. He wants to meet all the ranchers who are his neighbors, and there isn't a thing about ranching he doesn't want to know. His ranch is no fad. He is running it for the benefit of Canada first, and second for the purpose of making the "E. P. Ranch" a business venture, just as any level-headed man would do. When he is on the ranch he wears a 'ten gallon hat,' the same as all of the cowboys, and he does his work daily like any other ranch hand. 'Regular feller,' that's what we call him, 'regular feller!'"

SEEK $7,000,000 FOR NEAR EAST

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Representatives of the Near East Relief from all parts of the United States are meeting in Chicago this week to submit reports of the past year's work and to make plans for raising a $7,000,000 budget during the coming year. Delegates from six foreign countries will present fresh reports of the work which the organization is doing overseas.

The convention meets at the Hotel Windermere and its sessions will continue for three days, concluding with a public dinner of 1,500 plates at the Hotel La Salle. Several announcements of large gifts to the organization are expected during the convention.

Charles V. Vickrey, president of the International Near East Association, which is affiliated with the League of Nations, has just returned from the annual meeting of the international organization, and will be one of the chief speakers at the convention. Plans will be discussed for the observance on Dec. 7 of Golden Rule Sunday, a day set apart by all civilized countries for the furtherance of international peace based on the Golden Rule. The observance in America will be under the direction of Near East Relief.

The general report of the national treasurer, as it will be submitted to the convention, shows total disbursements during the year 1923 of $9,189,000. The organization closed the year with a deficit of $643,000, which has since been slightly reduced. Since its organization, the Near East Relief has appropriated for its overseas work more than $69,000,000. of which $18,300,000 has been spent in Russian Armenia, $21,760,000 in Turkey, $9,810,000 in Syria and Palestine, and $7,540,000 in Persia and Mesopotamia.

Many familiar weapons take their names from their inventors. The Bowie knife, Gatling gun, Mauser rifle and Colt revolver all perpetuate the name of the person who first thought of them.

ON THE SIDE LINES

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Harvard came out of the hard Middlebury game without a scratch and several former cripple will be able to return to the game this week to prepare for the coming of Holy Cross. The work of Cheek and Gehrke was very pleasing to the coaches.

NEW HAVEN. — The Georgia games showed Yale's line need some attention and coaches plan to make a number of changes. Lovejoy and the two ends, Luman and Bingham, were the only players sure of their position. Eddie Bench, Pond and Allen are sure in the beakfield with Bench running the team.
